Past, Present, Future Merge Into One VHS

Celebrating a golden anniversary means reminiscing about the past, assessing the present, and anticipating the future. As Keats concluded in "Sailing to Byzantium," it is a time for singing "Of what is past, or passing, or to come." It is a time for expressing pride in traditions and innovations,
a jubilant time, a sentimental time, and a hopeful time. Finally, it is a time when past, present, and future merge into one complete picture of Valdosta High School.

Past Excellence Prevails Through Hard Work

In order to appreciate the present, one must pause to review the past.

Valdosta High School's golden years have been filled with traditions — traditional events, traditional spirit, and traditional winning.

But this reputation for excellence comes only through hard work and determination.

One must strive to achieve, and then, having succeeded, he may look back with proud satisfaction. 1972 brings with it a golden anniversary, and Valdosta High School's opportunity to assess a memorable past with pride.

Students Savor Each Present Moment

Values from the past serve as a basis for evaluating both the present and future.
But the action is now — in the present.
At Valdosta High School, seizing the present meant utilizing new media, new methods, new curricular materials. It meant new freedom in dress and behavior, always tempered by consideration of others. It demanded winning in athletics and in academics.

It encouraged making friends. And it meant existentialism — savoring each precious moment — knowing that its essence could never be recovered.

Students Anticipate Future in Present Roles

One large part of the present is preparing for the future. For the whole purpose of education is to supply knowledge that will be useful in the future. By reaching out to others, students at Valdosta High School have shown their realization that the future is their responsibility. Through their interest in learning and through their outside contacts such as jobs, they are preparing for the time when they will be, not just a segment of the community, but its leaders.

Seniors Honor Coach Wright Bazemore

Using his own unique blend of characteristics, including his friendly manner, unending encouragement, sense of humor, and genuine concern for others. Coach Wright Bazemore has not only filled the role of an educator, but has also excelled as a father, husband, good citizen, and friend. To Curt, a freshman at Georgia Tech, and Pam, a sophomore at VHS, he has served as a firm but understanding father. And to his wife Betty Lou he has been a devoted husband.

To members of the Wildcat football team, he has been a challenging mentor. To football fans in Valdosta, he has been the un-defeatable coach. To both the state and the nation, he has been Coach of the Year for his outstanding record of 290 wins, 6 ties, and 43 losses.

To the senior class of 1972, Coach Bazemore has been a warm and sincere friend. Realizing the great contributions he has made to Valdosta High School and to the young people of Valdosta, the seniors bestowed on him their two greatest honors. They selected him as the main speaker for graduation exercises. And, by a majority vote, the senior class chose Coach Bazemore to receive the 1972 SANDSPUR dedication.

Senior Honors Cap Year's Hard Work

Four years of pushing, studying, striving for grades, and making self sacrifices for school activities paid off in the honors garnered on Honors Day for the class of 1972.

While most awards honored individual excellence, perhaps the most meaningful to the seniors was the spirit trophy earned by the class as a whole.

Signifying participation, loyalty, and enthusiasm in school activities, the trophy is the hoped for prize of each class. Robert Orr, president of the Student Council, made the presentation of the award to Michael Simmons, senior class president, amid the cheers of their fellow seniors.

To honor the individual efforts of forty-six seniors for maintaining ninety or above averages for four years of hard study, gold cords became the possessions of honor graduates to wear with their caps and gowns.

Finishing as the three top honor graduates meant special recognition for Margaret Espinosa, Melanie Eanes, and Renee Smith. Margaret achieved the rank of valedictorian by a fraction of a point above that of salutatorian Melanie Eanes.

Picked as the Best All-Round Senior by a vote of the faculty, Stanley Bounds served his classmates as vice-president of the senior class and as quarterback of the football team which made the seniors number one in Georgia and in the nation.

Students Sharpen Competitive Skills

Schooled in an atmosphere of competition and urged by their teachers to be the best, students strove throughout the year to excel.

Margaret Espinosa's top score on the SAT college boards and her solid A average made her Valdosta's STAR student. Margaret chose as her STAR teacher Mrs. William Wisenbaker, who taught her "to apply herself."

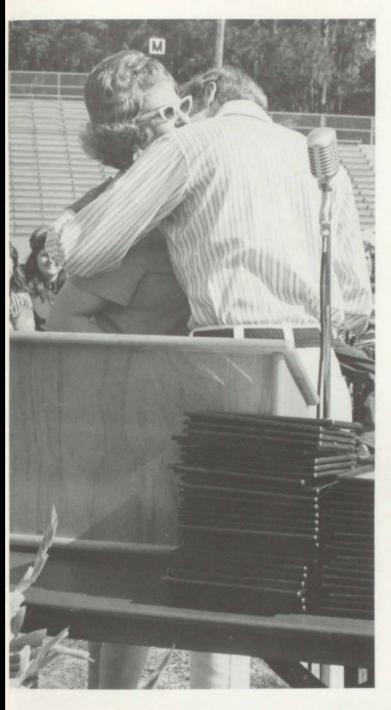

Competition even extended to the high school's clubs which attempted to surpass their rivals by inspiring loyalty to school functions and serving the community at large with special projects. Nancy Roger's Tri-Hi-Y copped the DECA chapter's Club of the Year trophy for their work.

Students who showed themselves to be the best in several areas of academic work served as the school's entries in the 1-AAA literary meet. Paul Nelson placed first in boys' solo. Also, Richard Dasher outspelled all boys for the spelling title. Melanie Eanes and Mary Nell Smart finished second in girls' spelling and girls' essay competition respectively.

Honors Encompass Varied Life Styles

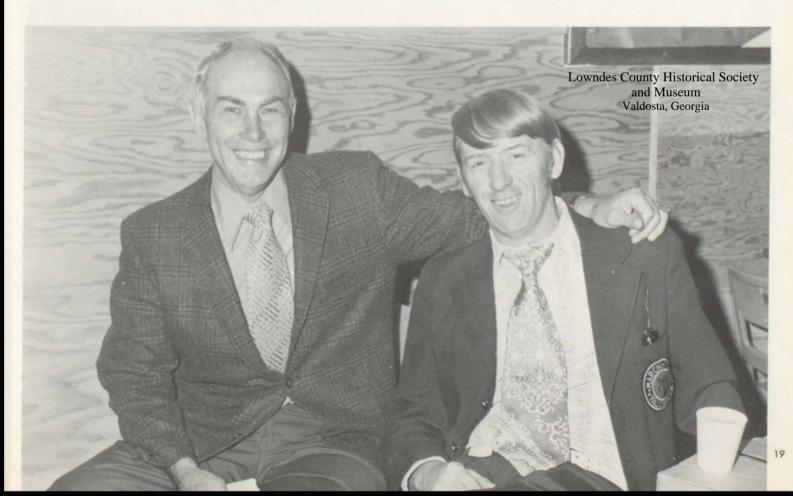

Valdosta High School rewarded its many outstanding students on Honors Day for their efforts in fields that varied from acting to taking shorthand dictation, to displaying efficiency in the kitchen.

Oscars or Tonys were not the trophies, but drama students worked just as hard to win their tributes as did George C. Scott or Jane Fonda. Ernie Carter, a member of the drama club — Studio 20 — since its inception, earned a scholarship to continue dramatic studies at Berry College.

Jerome Branham, Kathy Morgan, and Woody Leonard received recognition respectively as the most outstanding junior in speech, the most outstanding senior in speech, and the outstanding debater. Anita Sloan proved to be the most improved senior speech student. Joann Black was the most improved junior.

In the commercial classes, Newton Bassford was the best male typist, while Lynn Polonski was his female counterpart. Loretha Johns out-wrote everyone to win top shorthand honors.

Finally, STAR Student Margaret Espinosa proved to be talented in other areas when she won the Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow Award.

Valdosta Recognizes Its Own Children

Community recognition of achievement went beyond the walls and central offices of Valdosta High School; it reached into specific classes to honor Valdosta's own children.

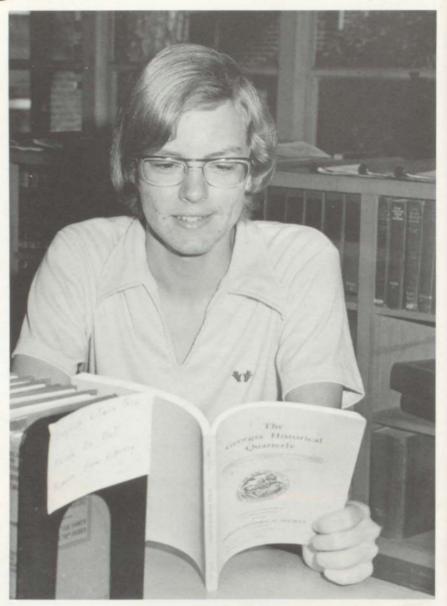

Several clubs and fraternal orders decided to honor young people by giving scholarships to enable them to continue their educations. Mary Alice King received the Moody Officers Wives Club Scholarship, while David Slowik took home a grant from the Elks Club.

Other groups sponsored essay contests such as the Fire Prevention Essay won by Nadine Bailey and Debbie Davis, the United Daughters of the Confederacy Essay won by Peter Smith, and Melanie Eanes's first place finish in the Alice Bingle Essay Contest.

Clubs with special activities also presented medals and checks. Tom Odom won the Most Outstanding American History Student honor from the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, while the Literary Guild recognized senior Renee Smith as the most improved English student.

Post Thirteen of the American Legion sponsored Ron Butler, Latrelle Wood, and Lisa Groover as delegates to Boys' and Girls' State, with Mark Eanes, Pam Maturi, and Eden Beck serving as alternates.

'Dosta Students Score at State

Though many people north of the piney wood section of Georgia think of Valdosta High as a factory for All-Americans and state championships in football, the scholastic scores students rolled up against state competition prove that image to be false.

Six students merited being chosen to attend the selective Governor's Honors Program on the basis of academic grades and performance on a state-wide test. Mary Nell Smart, music; John Smart, math; Robin Robinson, drama; Paul Reddick, science; Martica Griffin and Denise Roush, art, qualified for the summer study course.

Others won state contests in their special disciplines. Al Willis placed number one in Georgia in the French competition. Sherri Teffeteller's choice as third place girl student of the year at the state D.E. convention helped her chapter take the top state honors. In music, Ann Chitty earned a seat in the All-State Band.

Valdosta Students Spring National Honors

State boundaries served as a springboard to national honors for individual students and for Valdosta High School in the areas of scholarship, extracurricular activities, and athletics.

Scholastic achievement, the primary goal of teachers and students, became even more rewarding when experienced on a national scale. For Margaret Espinosa, the great reward came in the form of a National Merit Scholarship. Stanley Bounds, Robert Orr, Melanie Eanes, and Nancy Rogers experienced the same thrill of accomplishment by being named to the list of Outstanding Teenagers of America.

To the students who sought to gain fame for their Alma Mater through extracurricular activities, the honors also came. Hours of practice in precision marching and expert playing helped the Marching 'Cats cop the nationwide band contest at Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

Extra hours after school and their jobs also helped the DECA Club climb to a fourth place rating at the national convention in Los Angeles.

Through their efforts with the pen, school publications staff members Melanie Eanes, Robert Orr, Margaret Espinosa, Maggie LaMontagne, Nancy Rogers, and Gwen Stickley earned membership in the Quill and Scroll journalism society.

Finally, the football Wildcats clinched the number one spot among prep football teams in a national poll. Members of the 'Cats received scholarships to colleges stretching from Kansas to Auburn to Ole Miss. And Stanley Bounds and Steve Stanaland notched their names to the roll of All-Americans, while sophomore Stanford Rome gained honorable mention All-American.

'Cats Strike Gold At Springtime Fete

Ripping off gold trophies in the same manner that they employed to maul thirteen opponents, the members of the 1972 Wildcats gathered at a fete given by the Valdosta Touchdown Club. Serving as speakers for the affair, Arkansas Razorback coach Frank Broyles and Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech Athletic director, entertained the Georgia and national champions.

Most Valuable Player, a highly coveted award, went to All-American and state AAA back of the year Stanley Bounds. His favorite target, Stanford Rome, an honorable mention All-American in his sophomore year, grabbed the Most Versatile trophy. Steve Stanaland, another of 'Dosta's All-Americans and AAA lineman of the year, earned Most Outstanding.

Others carrying home gold included Bruce Hilton, Super Skinner; Dick Parker and Sidney Earnest, Spirit of the Wildcats; Paul DeMersseman, Best Offensive Lineman.

Calvin Lester and Bobby Joseph, Sportsmanship; Jim Clarkston and Alvin Payton, Best Defensive Lineman; Robert McCaskill, Best Offensive Back; O. D. Netter and Edwin Pompey, Best Defensive Backs; Scott Griffin and Clifford Bradley, Most Improved; Mike Cutchens and Louie Goodin, Most Loyal; Paul Lore and David Berrian, Most Aggressive.

Scholastic awards went to Bruce Hilton, David Register, and Stan Bounds for the highest averages in their classes.

Hard Work Reaps Basketball Honors

Long hours of practice and hard work reaped just rewards at the annual basketball banquet.

In March, team members gathered with coaches, faculty members, the administration, and basketball boosters for this event. After the dinner, Mr. Jim Melvin and Coaches Wright Bazemore, Joe Wilson, and Joe Mercer each spoke briefly, lauding the teams for their efforts.

Next came the presentation of awards. Hardwood stars Stanford Rome and Sharon Flanders received trophies for their Most Outstanding performances. Harry Housman and Elaine Robinson accepted the Most Faithful awards, while George Roundtree and Kim Smith won the Most Improved honors. Other members of the Wildcat and Kittens basketball teams receiving honors were David DeMersseman and Micki Folsom, Sportsmanship; John Rowe, Ruby Knight, and Polly Durden, Spirit; Pete Peterson, Hustler; Mala Barker, Most Aggressive; and Amos Haynes, Terry Graham, and Gwen Durham, Most Outstanding Junior Varsity.

August Graduates Make Peace Plea

"Peace on Earth" was the main theme for the summer graduation of sixty-eight Valdosta High School seniors on August 6, 1971. Commencement exercises, which took place at Whitehead Auditorium on the Valdosta State College campus, reflected this theme through the class song, the students' attitudes, and the speakers' addresses.

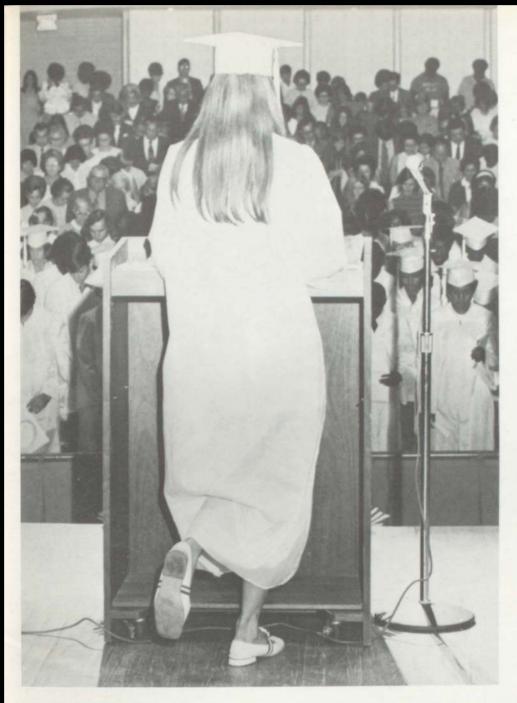

Graduates chose honor graduate Jeanie Williams to speak at the commencement ceremonies. Her address, entitled "Let It Begin With Me," complemented the class song, "Let There Be Peace On Earth," which was sung under the direction of Mr. Harold Cartee. Mr. Dixon Lowery Dismuke, guest speaker, addressed the students on the subject of "A Time and a Place for Us."

As Mr. Charles Green, former principal of VHS, presented the summer class of '71, chairman of the Valdosta Board of Education, Mr. Reuben Yancey, handed out diplomas. To close the services, the graduates sang the Alma Mater and Caroline Dame gave the benediction.

Look to New School Year

All great explorers have discovered new lands only when they turned their backs on old boundaries and old ways. In this same manner, students at Valdosta High School turned their backs on the past as they ventured into a new school year.

Art classes under the direction of Mrs. Patsy Smith started work early by painting lively caricatures and murals on the gray, dull walls to add a touch of color to the school. Student Council members also helped to give the old VHS a new look by placing artificial flowers on the lunchroom tables and by acquiring a jukebox for the lunchroom to enliven the old facility.

Pre-planning week activities kept everyone busy. Faculty members worked, cleaning classrooms and organizing books to be issued to students. Principal Lloyd Mims requested that the school board-establish stricter hair length regulations for the boys. And a steady stream of students flowed through the school to check the homeroom schedules posted on the doors.

Student Council members made several attempts to minimize the confusion in the halls. On the first day of school, they posted signs with the teachers' names and room numbers above each door, while individual members stationed themselves in the halls to give directions to sophomores and other new students.

Celebrations Mark Opening of School

From the time of Beowulf and the Anglo-Saxons, open handed hospitality has marked the behavior of English people and their American cousins. Every new occasion has called for a celebration.

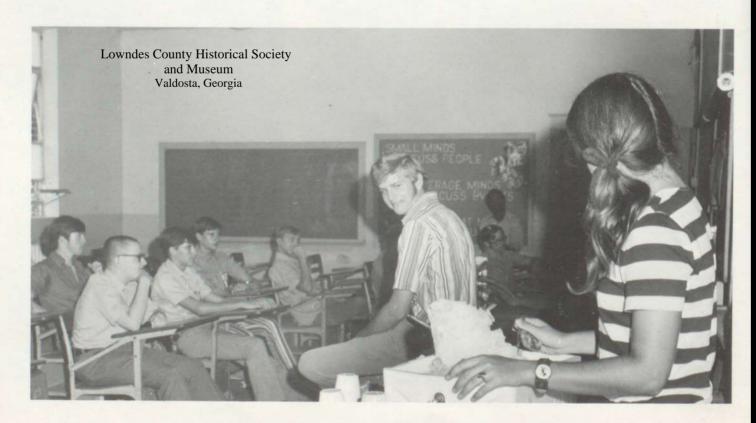

This year the students and faculty of Valdosta High School carried on this Anglo-Saxon tradition when they celebrated the arrival of a new principal, Mr. Lloyd Mims. On his birthday, the faculty entertained him with a surprise party in the library after school.

At a separate event in the library on Thursday before school opened, Student Council members welcomed back to school the entire faculty and the administration, who had been at work in the previous days preparing for the beginning of the new school year.

But all of the partying was not reserved for teachers. Together with the Interclub Council, the Student Council initiated new students into Valdosta High School at a casual get-together held in the carpeted team-teaching room assigned to Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Phillips.

All club presidents attended the party in order to inform the new students about their traditions and events that would take place in the coming year.

Sandspur Staff Sponsors Dance Contest

On the night before the annual assembly program held to promote yearbook sales, staff members learned that students who had promised to take parts could not participate.

After one hour of fuming and a few tears, Sandspur members came up with the idea of a question and answer bowl with members of the staff stationed in the audience to respond to questions with predetermined answers.

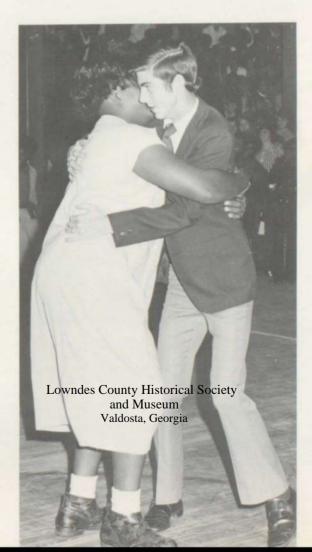

At the end of the program, the staff sponsored a dance contest in which willing and unwilling participants from the audience danced with Michael Simmons, Calvin Calloway, and Godfrey Hunter, who were dressed as girls.

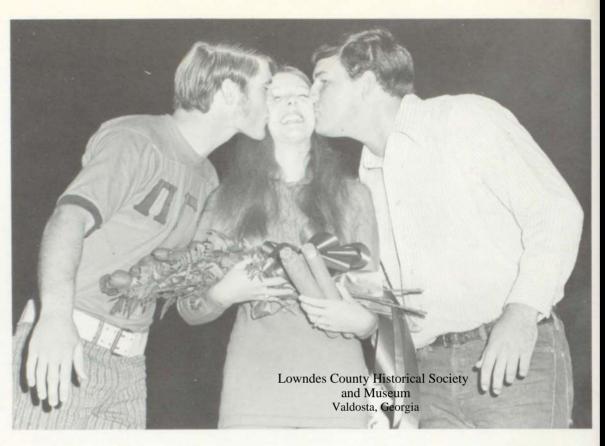

Mrs. George Kessler and Godfrey Hunter won the top award, a box of Pollywogs for each.

Other dancers from the audience included Mr. Lloyd Mims, Mr. John Booth and Mrs. Bill Spurlock.

Jani Miller furnished entertainment during the show with her rendition of "They're Gonna Put Me In the Sandspur." Vernon, a local progressive jazz band, provided music for the dance contest.

Several weeks before this program, the previous year's staff joined with the new staff to distribute the 1971 annuals in the school library.

For Homecoming, School Turns on To Wild, Wild West

Doc Holiday, Mat Dillon, Miss Kitty, and western school marms roamed the halls of Valdosta High School on Thursday, October 28.

These characters were actually students and teachers in disguise, celebrating Wild Wild West Day, one of many events during the 1971 homecoming week. On the two previous days these same people participated in the traditional Flame Day and Black and Gold Day.

Sharon Everson, elected Miss Flame by the football team, reigned over a bonfire Thursday night, held in front of the school library. Her proclamation of victory over the Westover Patriots, the Wildcats' opponents the following night, started the bonfire activities.

Downtown Patterson Street was the setting for the homecoming parade. Pretty girls, club and class officers, clowns, bands, cheerleaders, and over fifteen float entries made up the ten block parade. After all the judges viewed the floats, they awarded first place to the junior class entry, a western saloon showing the Patriots gambling their lives away.

Theme Change Marks Climax of Festivities

Disneyland, a Fantasy World, provided a theme change at the dance Friday night. Mickey Mouse, Snow White and the seven dwarfs, Jiminy Crickett, and Donald Duck, cavorting in a lollypop forest near Tinkerbell's castle, set the mood of the dance at which students and faculty members jived to music by the Georgia Prophets.

Earlier in the evening, the Wildcats pulled off a 47-6 victory over the Westover Patriots from Albany. But the biggest event that night came at halftime after the Marchin' Cats' performance.

Eight elected girls with their chosen escorts strolled across Cleveland Field to represent their classes.

When the entire homecoming court reached a spot three fourths of the way across the field, the important announcement came: Jo Lynne Johnston was the homecoming queen. After she stepped out before the other members of the court, Principal Lloyd Mims rushed onto the field to kiss and crown the queen.

Pep Rallies Generate Support for Wildcats

Despite cold weather and wet stands, every Friday morning during football season the entire student body filed into the stadium at Cleveland Field to show Coach Wright Bazemore's Wildcats their support.

And each Friday morning, band members assembled on the field to provide an additional boost to the spirit which VHS students generated for the 'Cats. Principal Lloyd Mims also incited enthusiasm by encouraging the students, "Let's do Two-Bits one more time."

As another standard feature of the rallies, football captains took turns speaking to their most immediate fans and urging them to attend the games. Coaches also added their views about each upcoming gridiron battle.

During basketball season, the pep rallies moved from Cleveland Field to the gymnasium for a more appropriate background. Because of inadequate seating facilities in the "Old Barn," many students had to sit in the stairways or remain standing, but the spirit never died. Winning points toward the spirit trophy stimulated class rivalry as sophomores, juniors, and seniors tried to outyell each other.

Meanwhile, two miles away on the Pinevale campus, ninth graders rattled the roof of their gymnasium with both football and basketball pep rallies.

Santa Mims Pays Visit To Spread Yule Cheer

When children think of Christmas they are concerned with Santa Claus, elves and presents. Realizing that high school students have not lost this sense of Yuletide wonder, Principal Lloyd Mims and Mr. Jack Coffey, assistant principal, donned costumes to impersonate St. Nick and one of his elves. They visited each classroom to distribute candy.

Student Council members further promoted the Christmas spirit by sponsoring the annual food drive and door decoration contest. Seniors brought in the food with the highest monetary value, while the sophomores capped the door decoration prize by picturing Scrooge calling for the end of door decorations.

Although Santa Mims did not visit Pinevale campus, students at this school still decorated their doors and halls with Christmas motifs.

On the main campus, Mr. John Booth's classes had a surprise, thanks to the generosity of some unknown person. This visitor left a tree and a note on the blackboard, proclaiming "There really is a Santa Claus."

Junior Barbara Eynon Reigns at Camelot

Allen Jay Lerner's lyrics to "Camelot" tell the story of "a fleeting wisp of glory." For Barbara Eynon, the night of March 18 proved to be not just a wisp of glory, but a glorious evening when she won the Miss Valdosta High School beauty pageant held at the Fine Arts Building on the Valdosta State College campus.

On a stage decorated to carry out the theme "Camelot," thirtyseven of Valdosta High School's fairest ladies appeared when the curtains opened, singing the theme song from the Broadway play.

Later, each girl competed individually in evening gowns, and again each appeared in groups of five wearing sportswear.

When the judges made their decisions for the top ten finalists, Debbie Palmer, Lynn Golden, Sandra Brownlee, Donna Pitts, Barbara Eynon, Karol Hendrix, Carolyn Mitchell, Terry Powers, Carol Johnson, and Eden Beck advanced further towards the crown. But when the top three names were announced, two girls, Donna Pitts and Carolyn Mitchell, tied for the position of first runner-up. And then Barbara Eynon became the new Miss Valdosta High School.

Junior-Senior Bash Generates Heat Wave

Dressed in formal gowns and dress suits, juniors and seniors let the steady rhythm of the drums, the screeching of the electric guitars, and the soothing tones of the organ woo their feet and bodies into a rock-n-rolling motion.

Bon Voyage Seniors set the theme of the dance at W. G. Nunn School as the junior class said goodby to their departing superiors with a night of music and food. Refreshment tables decorated with miniature sailboats carried out the theme.

Light showers did not stop a giant turnout for the farewell festival. Weather conditions generated immense amounts of heat to match the intensity of the band; therefore, everyone panicked when the servers ran out of cups for cold drinks.

But for some, the heat of the dance became too intense, and they retreated to the hall for a breath of cool air. This break also gave the girls a chance to get out of their uncomfortable shoes and to rest their tired feet.

Seniors Convict Principals, Honor Coach

Every dog has his day, good or bad, Senior Day proved to be a day of reckoning for principals Lloyd Mims, Jack Coffey, and Frank Wilson. Brought before a student judge and jury, they faced a trial by seniors, who were having a different kind of day, one of triumph. Although Mr. Coffey and Mr. Mims were acquitted, the jury found Mr. Wilson guilty of failing to stay in his study hall time. He was immediately hanged in effigy from the ceiling of the auditorium, an act which brought forth much approval from the audience.

In return, Mr. Coffey and Mr. Wilson ironically granted amnesty to all students with study hall time, and Mr. Mims graciously accepted a giant beer bottle as a gift from the senior class.

Other laughs came when unidentified potato heads made their traditional appearance, and a wedding was held for three mothers-to-be. Roars of sincere approval and a standing ovation came from the audience when Melanie Eanes, editor of the yearbook, announced that the seniors had voted to dedicate the 1972 SANDSPUR to Coach Wright Bazemore.

Concerts, Banquet Wind Up Activities

After football season was over and the band had regained its title of "Greatest Band in Dixie" at Mardi Gras in New Orelans, the final note had not yet been played. Spring activities included two concerts and an awards banquet.

In April, Urbie Green, famous studio musician, came from Montgomery, Alabama, for a concert with the symphonic band. Although the audience was threatened by a bomb scare and ordered to evacuate the auditorium at the beginning of the concert, Mr. Green made a greater impact on them with the sonic sound he produced from his electric trombone on such favorites as "P. C. Wallbanger."

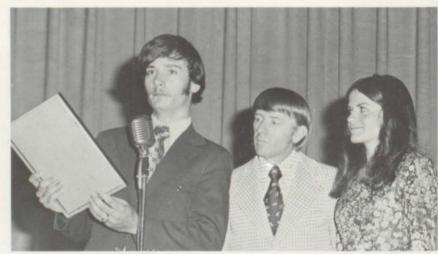

After the full-house attendance at the Urbie Green concert, Mr. Butenschon had momentary fears that the spring concert would be anticlimactic. But fans and supporters again filled the auditorium to hear the band play contemporary and standard favorites, ranging from excerpts from the rock opera Jesus Christ Superstar to the old favorite "Poet and Peasant Overture."

Following this last performance, the band held its annual awards banquet at the city auditorium. Guest speaker was Dr. Johnny Long, dean of music at Troy State University in Troy, Alabama, and director of the famed Troy State "Sound of the South" marching band.

Band members received their Mardi Gras and festival medals, senior plaques, and a special proclamation from the Georgia House of Representatives.

Seek Truth, Beauty, Speaker Advises

Using lines from Ralph Waldo Emerson's "Each and All," Donna Pitts, student speaker at commencement, urged her classmates to set the attainment of beauty and truth as their behavioral objective in life.

She reminded her listeners that teachers and parents taught the students to value truth sometimes above beauty. "But as we consider the objectives which from this time on we must set for ourselves, we find, along with Emerson, that truth is not enough," Donna declared.

To achieve this unification of beauty and truth, she reminded the graduates that they must have lives filled with work and faith. Only by service to others through work "will the more abundant rewards of life flow back to us," Donna continued.

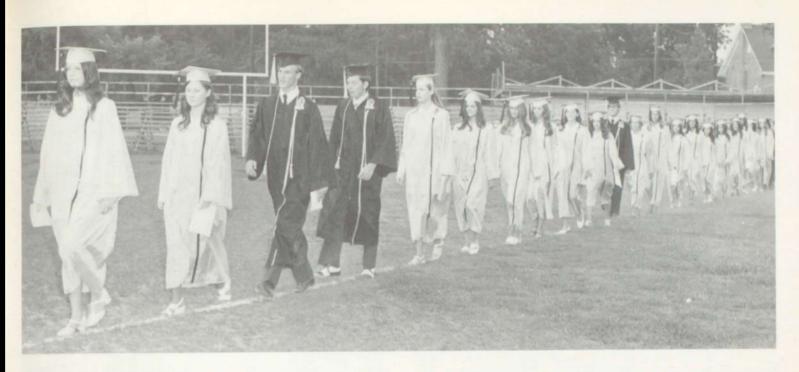

Along with this service, "faith in ourselves, our aspirations, and our fellow man is essential." For faith brings the realization of each person's own objectives.

Concluding her talk, Donna advised that "when we see the two — beauty and truth — as one, we will have reached the point at which we can safely invite society to evaluate our behavioral objectives."

Graduation Ceremony Serves As Entr'acte

Waiting in the wings for graduation ceremonies to begin, the seniors of the class of 1972 reviewed the scenes of their lives' first act. But the first strains of Isaac's "Pomp and Circumstance" signaled the end of reminiscing, the end of the act. Commencement served as a bridge between the first and second stages of their lives, between high school and work or college.

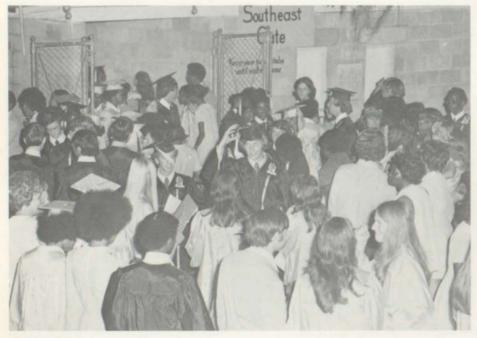

In a sense, students, parents, and faculty served as characters in the entr'acte called graduation. Melanie Eanes, salutatorian, helped raise the curtain when she offered the invocation.

Next, the speakers chosen by the students from their ranks, Donna Pitts and Pearce Scott, presented their advice as to how the graduates should play their new roles.

Stanley Bounds introduced the speaker for the evening, Coach Wright Bazemore, as a friend and teacher of every student. Mr. Bazemore told the graduates that they possessed unique qualities and lived in a unique town, and that they could realize bright futures if they had the determination to work.

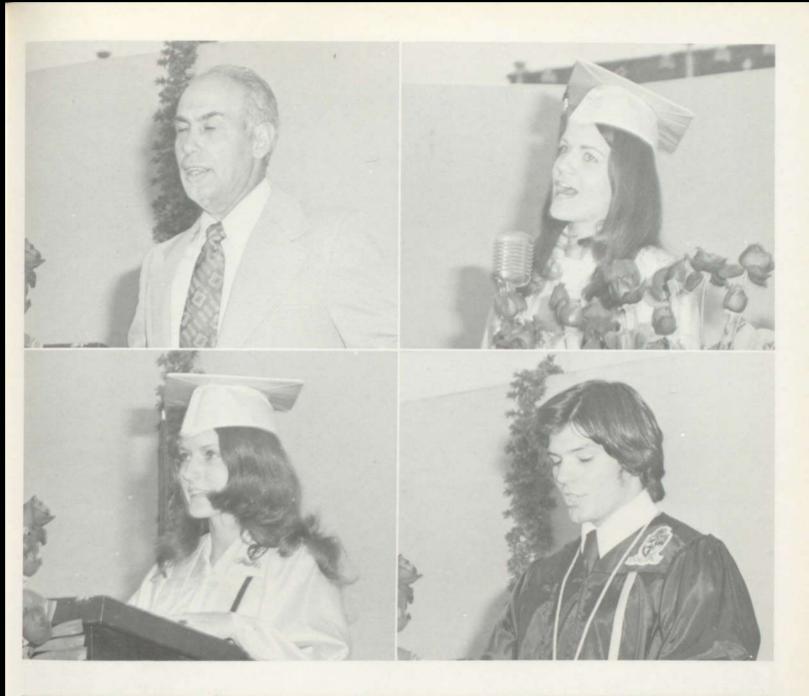

Woody Leonard ended commencement with the benediction. Finally, the sound of "Pomp and Circumstance" moved the graduates off stage into the second act.

Only Five Principals Have Guided 'Dosta

Any high school needs strong supervision. In the past, able men such as Mr. J. P. Mott, Mr. Howell Martin, Mr. Howard Bridges, and Mr. Charles Green provided the necessary leadership for Valdosta High School. With the 1971-72 school year, a new principal, Mr. Lloyd Mims, came to VHS to fill the place left vacant when Mr. Green resigned to return to graduate school.

Moving up from the junior high school, Mr. Mims had the reputation of being a strict disciplinarian. And from his first day on the job, he got his message across. Rules would be enforced, he announced, evenly and fairly for everyone.

Helping Mr. Mims with his administrative duties, Mr. Jack Coffey and Mr. Frank Wilson served as assistant principals. Down at the Pinevale campus, Mr. C. T. Dickerson ramrodded the school with Mr. James Smith as his helper.

Administrative Decisions Reflect Times

Following in the capable footsteps of Superintendents Cleveland and Nunn, Mr. Foster Goolsby maintained the high standards set by his predecessors. His task of carrying out the school board policies was an exacting one, yet Mr. Goolsby always took time out from his daily routine to speak to students and offer them gifts of witticisms.

But Mr. Goolsby was not the only administrator who stayed busy. Board of Education members made numerous plans concerning the new high school, and also established new regulations concerning the old school. Among the policies they approved were the stricter hair length regulations for the boys and blue jeans as acceptable school attire for the girls.

February elections brought about many changes in the board membership. Mr. John Howell and Mr. I. H. Tillman decided not to run for reelection; Mr. William Eanes and Dr. Glenn Herrin filled these positions. Next, Mr. Reuben Yancey, chairman of the board, turned in his resignation, and Mr. Claydon Barron was appointed to replace him. Dr. Robert Quattlebaum became the new chairman, and Mr. Yancey took over as the board's attorney.

Counselors Help Mold Students' Characters

Students and teachers alone do not form a school. Guidance personnel and administrative secretaries, an often forgotten troup, help to form the student's character rather than his mind.

Heading the guidance department, Miss Marguerite Ford also served as senior counselor. After working as an educator for 42 years, Miss Ford retired this year. Besides counseling, she has devoted much time to teaching and testing students.

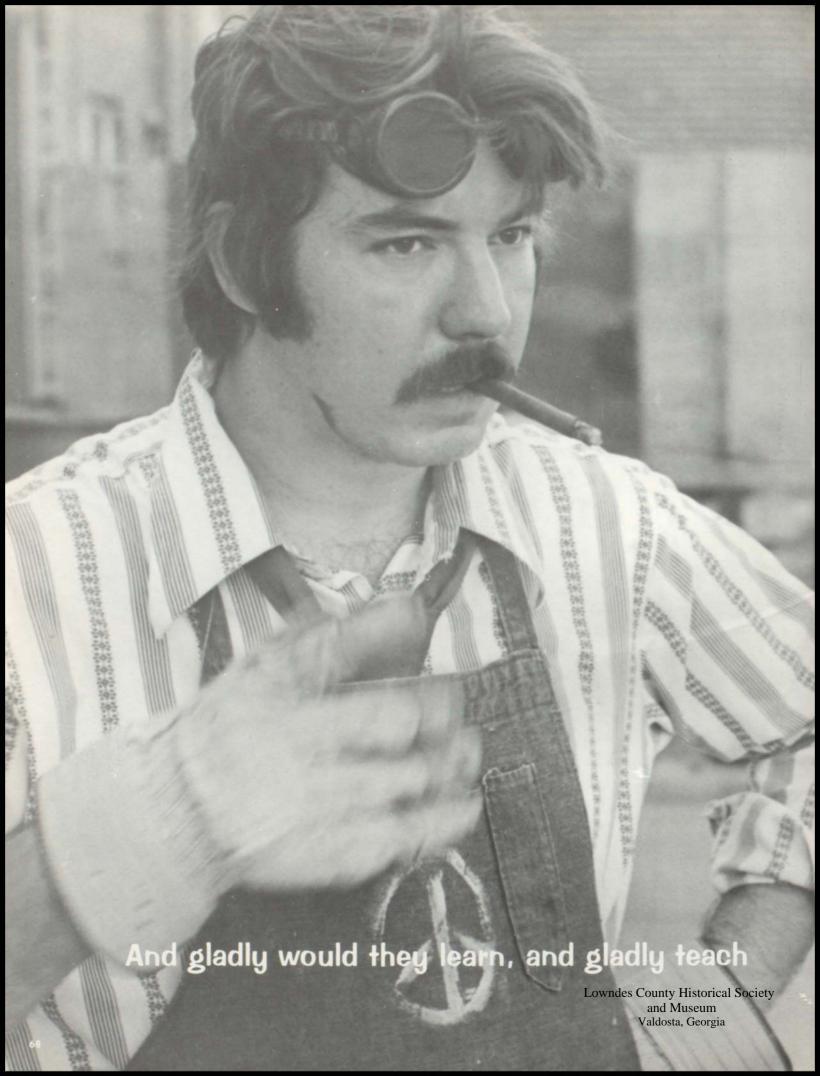

Mrs. Virginia Wisenbaker, Mr. Norman Britt, and Mrs. Laverne Torrence also served as guidance counselors for the juniors, sophomores, and freshmen. Mrs. Wisenbaker coordinated the Drug Council program.

Backing up the guidance crew and the administration, the indispensable secretarial staff performed many routine tasks and odd jobs. Mrs. Buck Thomas filed permanent records and mailed transcripts; Mrs. W. D. Burgsteiner balanced the financial books; Mrs. George Sutton kept up with daily attendance; Mrs. Jimmy Partee served as receptionist. Miss Trouise Taylor and Mrs. Hazel Gibbs kept Pinevale running smoothly, while Mrs. Tim Anderson aided the VHS guidance counselors.

Six teachers instead of one! Some students may think that situation means triple trouble.

But the juniors and seniors enrolled in the new course entitled "The Humanities: Man in the Twentieth-Century American" adjusted to a variety of teachers, one for each major unit of work.

Mrs. Harry Wolinski, one coordinator of the class, introduced the unit describing the humanities: what they are, and what they do. Mrs. W. E. Wisenbaker, the other course planner, introduced the historical perspective of the twentieth-century United States, while Mr. Jerry Pilcher and Mrs. Patsy Smith taught art and style. Mrs. John Owens presented the drama unit. Mr. William Staeger, intern teacher, introduced the class to all forms of music from "Requiem Mass" by Berlioz to jazz.

Although a textbook, The Humanities in Three Cities, was issued to the humanities students, it was seldom used, except as a reference guide.

Art Students Literally Paint School

On hot July and August days before school opened, Mrs. Tom Bush Smith and a select crew of sophomore painters roamed the formerly austere halls of Valdosta High School. Behind them they left globs of glowing colors, unusual scenes of the athletic students and the Alma Mater.

With these wall decorations, Mrs. Smith's art services classes helped increase Wildcat spirit during the school year. Besides painting the school, literally, her classes painted a coat of arms for every teacher at school. Individual work included doing macramé, dot pictures, and monochromatic pictures.

Mr. Jerry Pilcher's art classes sold hand-painted book covers to insure longer lives for books. Different symbols — such as gold triangles, squares and half-circles on a black background — spelled VHS. Classes prepared pictures which they sold at the annual art show held during April. With the combination of Mrs. Smith's classes and those of Mr. Pilcher's, this show had its largest group of participants.

Music Men Whistle While They Work

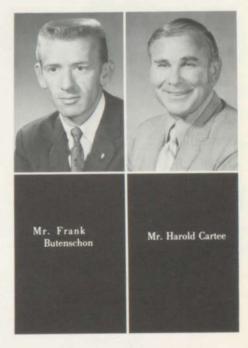

Though surrounded by expensive instruments, Valdosta's music men, Mr. Frank Butenschon and Mr. Harold Cartee, nevertheless often employed old fashioned whistles in order to smooth out a rough spot in a song or to call up a snatch of a tune. These teachers served as the leaders of the various musical groups on the Valdosta High School campus.

Mr. Frank Butenschon taught a full schedule that included periods of beginners' and advanced band, lab band, and music appreciation. This last course sought to introduce band and non-band students to the history, theory, and styles of music in hopes of widening the teenagers' spectrum beyond the top 40 rock.

Mr. Butenschon sometimes received relief from his strenuous schedule when Ray Smith took over his lab band class. Mr. Smith will teach next year at VHS.

Mr. Harold Cartee's concern lay with the instruments located in the throats of his chorus members. He taught one period at Pinevale and came to the main campus for one period.

Stage-Struck Students Learn Acting Arts

"Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the towncrier spoke my lines."

— Hamlet

Often Mrs. John McRae echoed these instructions of Hamlet to his players on the art of speaking in her five classes of speech and drama.

Though her classes in the arts of the stage and debators' platform did not produce an Orson Wells or a Clarence Darrow, her pupils did learn to escape the pitfalls of "oh" and "uh" and to express themselves with clarity.

Mrs. McRae used reader's theater, extemporaneous and prepared speeches, and tapes of students' voices as vehicles for the students to employ in these courses.

English Students Sweat Out Many Exams

"You will have a test in here tomorrow over the material we have covered this six weeks." This statement echoed throughout the school year in all classes, especially in the English classes.

For most of the English students, the tests were burdens for everyone except a few brilliant scholars. Senior English classes suffered each six weeks. Many pupils in levels 124 and 123 experienced tests which involved Macbeth, King Lear, Fathers and Sons, Lord of the Flies, Ancient Mariner and Pygmalion. Mrs. Harry Wolinski, Mr. Duane Pitts, and Mrs. Fred Pulliam gave lengthy examinations to astonished students.

Juniors searched their minds for answers to questions concerning Ethan Frome, Scarlet Letter, Of Mice and Men and Hamlet. Mrs. Woodrow Leonard, Mrs. Donald Phillips, Mrs. Bob Raiford and Mrs. George Kessler quizzed their classes.

Sophomores and freshmen took tests covering Shakespeare's Julius Caesar and Romeo and Juliet. Miss Eloise Terry, Mrs. Tommy Barr, and Mrs. Ed Dees gave these tests.

Knowledge of Past Helps Age Students

"I grow old learning something new every day."

- Solon

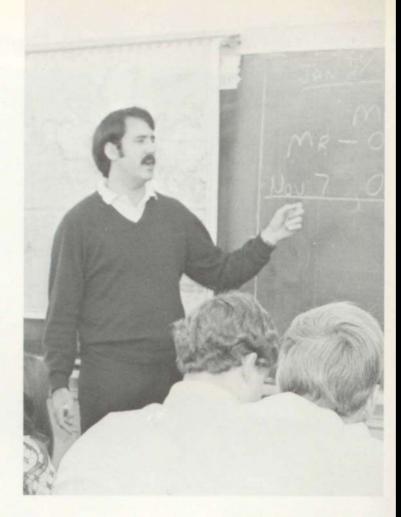

Studying for Mrs. W. E. Wisenbaker's two-hour exams to be given in one fifty-five minute period or Mrs. Bill Holt's favorite endurance essay quizzes caused many social science students to agree with Solon that they grow old learning something new.

But learn the students did. From the history of the Chin Dynasty to the rise of robber barons in America, social studies classes confronted world and American history in an attempt to gain an understanding of themselves by knowing the forces which shaped their forefathers. Often the honest appraisal of their past given by the teachers caused some students to forsake past prejudices and reinforce new beliefs.

History department head, Mrs. W. E. Wisenbaker, flooded her students with information formed into charts and projects in the hope that something would sink in to the deep reaches of her pupils' brains.

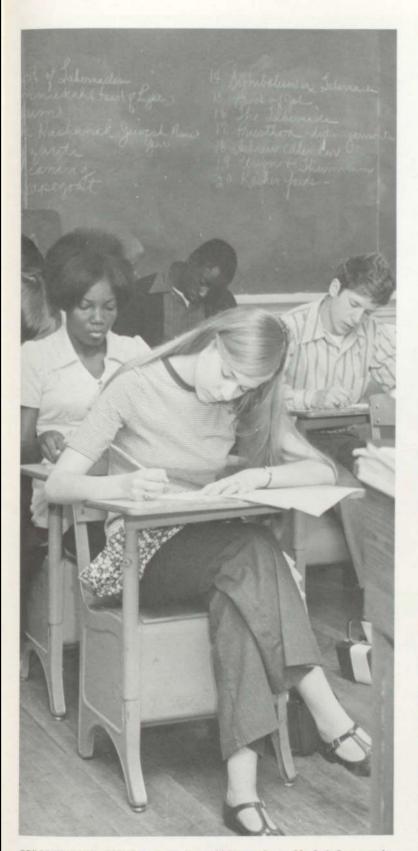

Courses varied from Chinese history to the study of the Jewish heritage as found in the Old Testament.

In order to increase his background for his Asian study courses, Mr. Jack Crouse journeyed to India in a study group headed by Dr. William Gabard, a leading expert on Indian affairs.

Math Magic Mystifies Many Students

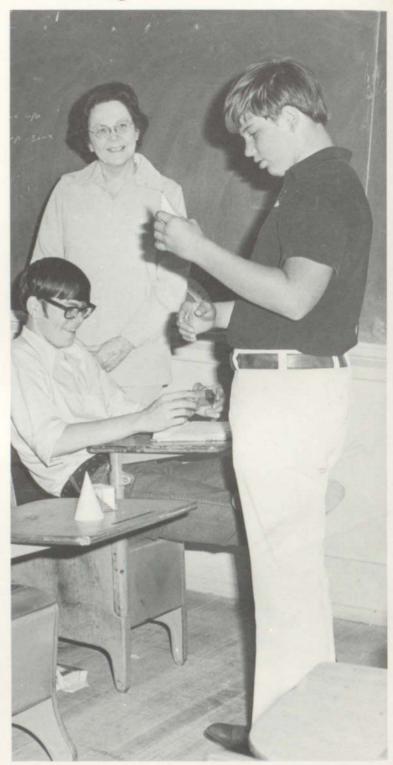

Faced with the problem of finding the circumference of a parabola, math pupils often felt that figuring out the magic tricks of Harry Blackstone or an escape act of Houdini was easier to do. But when the trick became clear, after several crumpled sheets of paper and piles of eraser dust, satisfaction flooded the students.

Well-trained teachers, using clear explanations and giving encouragement at every turn, aided their students in unraveling the confusing mysteries of algebra, trig, geometry, and Math V.

Mr. Mike Rogers, the Merlin of Valdosta High School and also the head of the math department, set guidelines for his fellow number wizards in drawing up class plans.

Finally, after learning the basic workings of numbers, variables, and geometric theorems, some seniors felt prepared enough to tackle the biggest of mysteries, Math V. This course consisted of units normally studied in the first year of college math. Only a few brave souls attempted this course under the guidance of Mr. Rogers.

Curiosity Guides Novice Scientists

Curiosity may have killed the cat, but its effect on the study of science is constructive rather than destructive. Students used their innate curiosity to learn that science establishes new occupations, attacks diseases, opens new fields in the business world, and pushes back the frontiers of space.

In the ninth grade general science classes, Mrs. Martha Freeman, Mrs. Frances Beard, and Mr. James Odom encouraged their students to learn the basic chemical elements, phylum orders, and the primary steps of dissection — with earthworms as their victims.

By the time they reached the main campus and the laboratories presided over by Mr. Julian LeFiles, Mrs. Allen Smart, and Mrs. Edward Jones, science students could give their natural curiosity full vent in the investigation of frogs, snakes, crayfish, and larger animals, as well as birds.

Mr. W. E. Davis, who returned to the classroom this year, greeted intrepid explorers in the realm of physics. He demanded from these boys and girls a spirit of wonder about scientific equations, changes in matter, thermal expansion, formulas, and the operation of the oscilloscope.

Juniors and seniors who steered clear of the physics lab could still exercise their curiosity in the study of chemistry under the guidance of Mr. Henry Grudzien.

Language Classes Choose From Four Offerings

"Veni, vidi, vici." "I came, I saw, I conquered." Julius Caesar made this famous pronouncement when he conquered Pharnaces, King of Pontus. Most second-year Latin students recognized this phrase, especially on their finals.

Mrs. A. C. Wisenbaker and Mr. Harold Sloane taught Latin. Mr. Sloane drilled his classes in the basics of conjugation and vocabulary, while Mrs. Wisenbaker gave instruction in translating the various mythological tales and selections from Caesar's Gallic Commentary. Her Latin II class also produced skits.

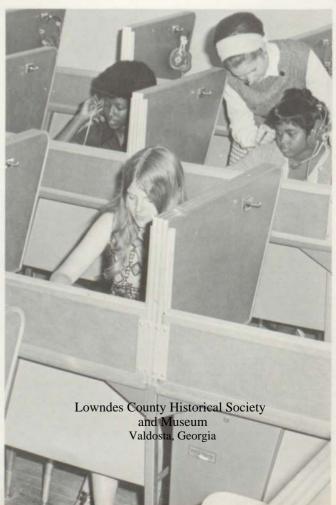

Mrs. Clyde Connell taught her French students to repeat sounds heard during recording sessions. Mrs. Jim Cannister played a dual role as French and Spanish instructor. Her classes expressed themselves verbally rather than by the use of written exercises.

German classes also used tapes to help them with the difficult pronunciations they encountered. Mr. Tommy Barr taught this language.

Future Secretaries Master Machines

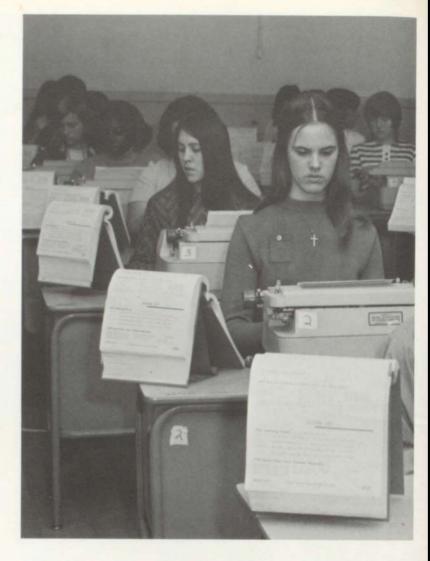

Today's business world has come a long way from the traumas depicted in Elmer Rice's play The Adding Machine. Instead of fearing machines, office workers now recognize that their jobs would be next to impossible without these time-saving devices. Basic training in the use of a variety of machines is imperative for any secretary who wants to master her job.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Vance Reynolds and Mrs. Maurice Herrin, bookkeeping classes learned to manipulate adding machines, calculators, duplicators, and mimeograph machines, Mrs. Ralph Spurlock, Miss Josie Thomas, and Mrs. Mike VanWyck stressed the importance of accurate, speedy typing, with only a reasonable number of gross errors per minute. Mrs. VanWyck supplemented regular shorthand classes by giving practice in the use of the dictaphone.

Clerical office practice and secretarial office practice supplemented the basic business curriculum of typing, shorthand and bookkeeping.

Cosmetology Classes Learn New Styles

Just as fads differ from day to day, hairstyles constantly change. Today, anything goes from Afros to Shags. Lengths vary with the type of cut, one of the currently popular styles being the long silky look.

Cosmetology classes on the Pinevale campus learned to set all the new styles; they also studied barbering and techniques of manicuring. Males joined the predominantly female classes and found that this field intrigued them. Boys not only learned to fix and cut other boys' hair, but also mastered the basics in the styling of girls' hair.

These amateurs at first fashioned different hairstyles and gave free manicures to their fellow classmates. But after completing their course, they could practice and receive professional fees for their services.

Miss Laberta Stallworth instructed the cosmetology classes.

Students Manipulate Basic Work Tools

Often students will ask, "What good will this class do me?" But in two classes this question was never asked.

Mr. Joseph Williams taught his brickmasonry boys how to get out and make money, between four and five dollars an hour.

After finishing the academic portion of their schedules, these boys dashed out to the brickmasonry building next to the materials center, stripped to the waist, and grabbed trowels. For two hours they worked as apprentice masons. This year they added space for Mrs. Patsy Smith's art classes, built a patio for Mr. Jerry Pilcher's art classes, and dotted the campus with brick-supported seats.

Younger boys on the Pinevale campus followed the directions of Mr. Isaiah Isom as they learned to manipulate basic tools and to perform simple tasks related to industrial arts. While all of these students could not look forward to working as mechanics or carpenters, each one of them did end the year with the satisfaction of knowing that he could make simple household repairs or build shelves.

Home Ec Girls Use Old Stoves, Study New Ideas

Homemaking and housewife used to be synonymous terms, but not anymore. Today, with many young people, male and female, moving out of the family nests even before finishing college, home economics concerns everyone.

And naturally, since more men are now doing their own and family cooking, they have perfected timed ovens, improved cookware, microwave ovens, and oven-ready meals.

No boys at Valdosta High School, however, enrolled in homemaking classes. And the girls who did take these courses used conventional old style ranges.

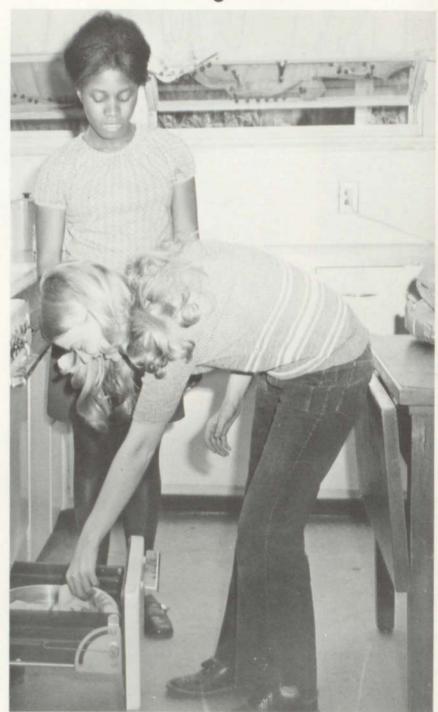

Mrs. W. R. Davis, Miss Ossie Ash, and Mrs. Paul Hughes managed to infuse a note of modernity into their classes by having special units on pattern designing, personal grooming, making gifts and interior decorating. Macramé gave many girls outlets for their creativity.

And girls in these classes spent much time studying marriage and the family, child psychology, and sex education. Mrs. Robert Gast, coordinator of the class for expectant mothers, taught the last unit.

Novice Drivers Test Teachers' Courage

"It is easy to be brave from a safe distance."

- Aesop

Valdosta's drivers' education teachers, Joe Wilson, Joe Mercer, and Ken Williams, did not know the privilege of being brave from a distance, for when they went to class they had to bring along their courage. This courage had to be used every time the instructors carried out students — many for the first time — on Valdosta's roads to test their classroom learning.

Mr. Ken Williams, a battle-tested veteran of teaching novice drivers, suffered a shocking experience while out on a cruise. While he was instructing a girl to back out of a store's parking lot, she instead pressed on the gas with the car in drive. Hearing shattering glass, Mr. Williams looked up to find the car sitting in the inside of the Minute Market.

Classes met every period throughout the day to accommodate the large number of pupils desiring the course. Meeting in the newspaper section of the library, the students and their teachers managed to stay abreast of any accident reports involving fellow students.

Responding to former President Johnson's call to make war on poverty, students taking D.E. and D.C.T. proceeded to do battle by getting jobs and earning their own spending and saving money.

These boys and girls attended required classes in the mornings, and in the afternoons they changed into working clothes and headed for the different businesses at which they earned their wages.

D.E., or Distributive Education, trained juniors and seniors for futures in marketing. Besides the required courses, their class work consisted of one hour in school each day under the tutelage of Mr. Norman Greene. In the afternoons they put their class learning into practice at such local establishments as Sears or Milbet's.

Mr. Greene's counterparts in D.C.T., Mr. Levi Taylor and Mr. J. P. Horne, trained their pupils for production jobs. Students worked as telephone operators, mechanics, and as lab specialists in the doctors building.

More Students, Cars Restrict Playing Areas

With the installation of five portable classrooms last year, girls had little space left for outdoor P. E. classes. To make matters worse this year, the parking areas spilled over onto the front lawn where girls usually play softball and volleyball.

When weather conditions called for having classes outside, students would hear the staccato crackle of the intercom system and the stereotyped plea: "Please move your cars so the girls can play ball."

move your cars so the girls can play ball."

Of course, Mrs. M. D. Brooks and Miss Claudia
Jones had no competitors for the use of mats and baskets in the old gym where they taught girls tumbling and dancing.

Nor were there any major changes in girls' P. E. attire except that in addition to their usual tennis shoes, socks and gymsuits, they could wear sweat shirts and pants.

And while playing areas and costumes were somewhat restricted, boys and girls alike learned to manipulate and control the motions of balls of varied shapes: tennis balls, volleyballs, baseballs, softballs, basketballs, and footballs.

Coaches Charles Greene, Jack Bethea, and Edward Jones instructed the boys.

Wildcat Statistics Impress Nation

Many teams win state football crowns, but only one becomes national champion.

According to Art Johlfs of National Sports News, the Wildcats gained this rating for 1971 because of their recordbreaking statistics.

In ten outings the 'Cats scored 478 points, while averaging 418.9 yards per game in offense, with 198.7 yards coming along the ground and 220.2 through the air. On defense they allowed only 99 points, yielding 206.7 yards per bout. With these statistics, the 'Cats entered the playoffs for state championship.

Three games later they captured the state 1-AAA crown. In these games, they racked up 151 points, giving up only 38. Although team effort led to this 13-0 record, certain team members helped pile up the points.

Quarterback Stanley Bounds threw 259 passes with 161 complete for 2,785 yards and 30 touchdowns. He ran for 485 yards and 23 touchdowns. Split end Stanford Rome made 72 pass receptions for 1,573 yards and 21 touchdowns. Dick Parker also broke the state record for PAT's by kicking 46 extra points in regular season play and 19 more in playoff games.

From Flip of Coin 'Cats Go for Goals

From the first flip of the coin, the Wildcats thundered forward, pounding their way to the goal.

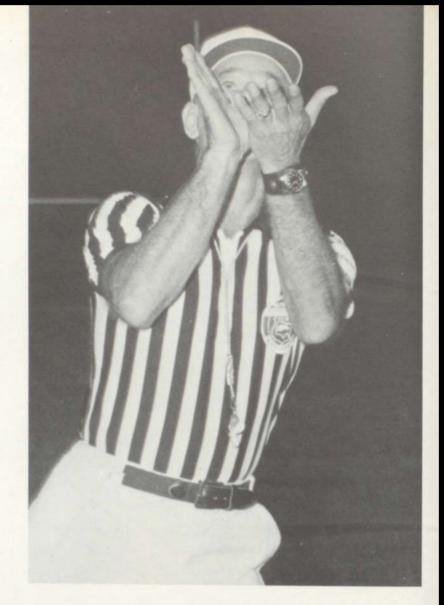

To start each game, two captains walked briskly to the center of the field where an umpire sent a coin spiraling upward. As the spinning coin tumbled down, Coach Wright Bazemore mustered his players for the efforts they had to show during the game. Finally, the coin dropped, and the Wildcats sped off, running hard.

Thousands of fans, students, and adults alike, rumbled the stands and encouraged the 'Cats to pick up their heels and go.

With a potent passing and running attack featuring the duo of Stanley Bounds, quarterback, and Stanford Rome, split end, the Wildcat's offense hurtled forward, gaining yardage in the first five regular season games. On each play the 'Cats bouldered their way to the goals, averaging 40 points per game.

Although the offense stacked up the points, it would have run in vain without the defense that collided explosively with the opponents to keep them from scoring.

During the expressive field show, fans and students expressed their emotion by loud and jubilant cheering, while the band saluted the team with the "Fight Song."

Defense Balances Championship Race

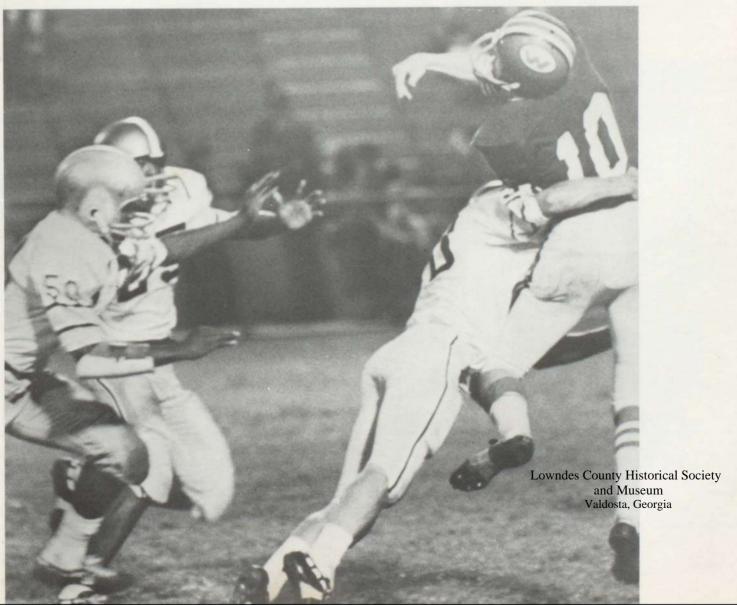

After a seesaw battle with the Moultrie Packers, ending 42-21, the undefeated Wildcats balanced defensive and offensive play as they aimed for the region 1-AAA crown.

In this duel the 'Cats and Packers had a stalemate in the first half, but in the second stanza the Wildcats put together a high scoring offense and a stingy defense to break the deadlock.

With defensive men such as Louie Goodin, Alvin Payton, David Berrian, Steve Stanaland, Jim Clarkston, and Gary Rowe, the 'Cats made their final advances toward the region championship. They routed Monroe, 75-22; Westover, 47-6; and Tift County, 60-28, to gain a 9-0 record, but they still had to face crosstown rival Lowndes High.

After clobbering Lowndes, 40-0, the 'Cats had scored 478 points, an average of 47.8 per game while allowing their opponents only 99 points for an average of 9.9 per game.

Bolstered by these impressive statistics, the 'Cats prepared to enter the state playoffs.

Dominoes Fall At 'Cats' Will

Blam! Zam! Crash! Down they went! After ending their regular season, 13-0, the Wildcats used the domino theory to topple three of the best 1-AAA teams in the state and to cop their eighth state championship since 1960.

Valdosta's 'Cats began their drive by knocking over the Demons from Warner Robins. After a scoreless first quarter, the 'Cats combined their efforts in a synchronized fashion to take the first postseason contest, 35-6, and to win the chance to battle for the South Georgia crown against the Wildcats of Laney High from Augusta.

Before the visiting 'Cats knew what had happened, they had fallen just like the Demons, as the Valdosta 'Cats broke off to an early lead and then exploded to win, 54-20, and to qualify for the final struggle.

In the last game of post-season play, the 'Cats gave over eighty players a chance to see action in the thrashing of the Imps from Avondale, 62-12.

'Dosta Staff Unleashes Blitzkrieg

In strategy sessions for the '71 grid campaign, Commander-in-chief Wright Bazemore and his staff of six field officers decided to unleash the blitzkrieg or "lightning war" upon unsuspecting opponents.

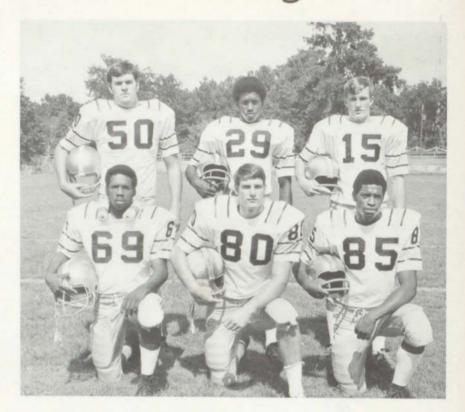

While sending his troops through practice maneuvers in the afternoons, General Bazemore lured his adversaries into a false sense of security before every Friday night attack by telling the press of the weak state of his men and praising his awesome foes for their superior size and talent.

But after the kickoff, the enemy soon realized the strength of the Wildcats. Backfield boss Joe Wilson led the first wave of attacking 'Cats by bombarding the opponents with the record-breaking aerial duo of Captain Stan Bounds to Stanford Rome.

Showing no quarter for the stunned and riddled defenses, Wilson's warriors advanced with a regiment of ball-toting infantry ripping off huge amounts of turf behind an offensive line trained by Charles Greene and Julian LeFiles.

'Dosta's secretary of defense, Jack Rudolph, constructed a line of steel and a sticky secondary to intercept any counterattack the enemy might muster.

In order to keep pressure on the foes, numerous soldiers trained by lieutenants Joe Mercer and Edward Jones backed the first line troops.

Practice Pays Off, Yields Grid Victories

Success is not ready-made. One must earn it through hard work. For the Wildcats, success did not start with the gridiron victory, but began many months before the actual football season.

Preparation for the 1971 grid contests started in August at the 4-H camp. Here, players who had grown rusty during the summer months got into shape; many lost a few pounds in the process. During the two weeks' training session, players followed a rigorous schedule; from eight o'clock until noon they had morning practice; during the noon hour they ate and rested; they finished their day with skull practice in the afternoon.

Like the Wildcats at training camp, the Pinevale Tigers had a rough 1971 football schedule to follow. Instead of practicing against players on their own team, though, the Pinevale Tigers faced opponents like Thomasville and Waycross. Under head coach Jack Bethea, the Tigers were able to come from behind and clinch a winning season.

Leaders of the Pinevale offense included quarterback Johnny Holcomb, Robert Demps — halfback, and Phil Teffeteller — offensive lineman. Leaders of the Pinevale defense included Willie Williams — defensive lineman, and Tobi Berrian — defensive back. The Tigers finished the season, 5-2-2.

But as soon as the season ended, the Pinevale Tigers began to attend spring training at the high school. During March, players practiced every day from 2:30-to 6:30. At the end of spring training in the Has-Been Will-Be game, preparation paid off for the Will-Be's, who defeated the Has-Been's, 13-12.

Eyelash Victories Excite Faithful Fans

Determined to win but not guaranteeing the point spread, the hardcourt edition of the Wildcats played before crowds who sweated, yelled, bit their fingernails, and crossed their fingers to pull their heroes through to victory.

And the efforts of the fans did not prove futile, as almost one fourth of the games ended with less than a two point difference showing on the clock.

These eyelash wins helped raise the hair on the backs of fans' necks, and added a few more strands of grey to the already silver head of 'Dosta mentor Joe Wilson.

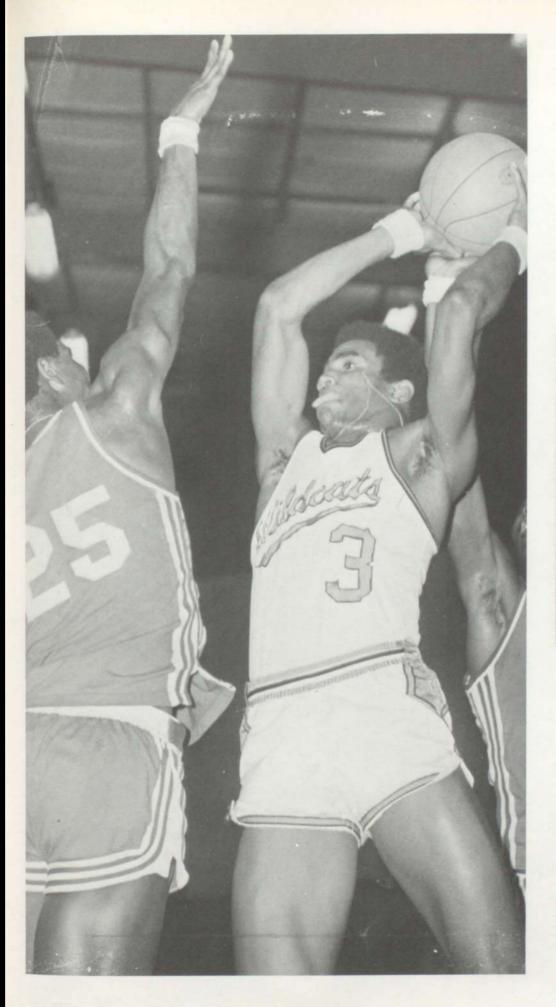

Unable to end up on top of the heap as region champions for the third year in succession, the 'Cats, nevertheless, posted an 18-5 chart and nailed down third place in the region.

Hoop Wins Highlight Emotional Season

Any win is important for the overall record of a basketball team. But after the uniforms are put in storage and the season's campaign ended, each player, coach, and fan keeps memories of special games when the clock seemed as if it would never end, the air was charged with tension, and the standing fans and perspiring players boiled over with emotion.

Close victories and heartbreaking defeats in tilts with ancient rivals seared themselves on the minds of Crosstown enemy, Lowndes County, provided three such games. After a late start due to an extended football season, the 'Cats fell prey to the Vikings by fourteen points. But a few games later, on their home court, the 'Cats returned the favor by the same margin. In the rubber match, the city hoopsters flogged their country neighbors.

When All-American Al Smith of Albany visited the Wildcat lair with the Tribe, the gym filled to capacity. Using teamwork, the 'Cats allowed Smith his customary 42 points but pressed his less talented mates into mistakes and missed baskets. Fans flooded the floor to congratulate the Wildcats when their tactics resulted in a 69-64 victory and first place in regular season standings.

Girls Basketball Sestet Takes Prat Falls

Comedians learn the art of taking prat falls, fake dives that make people laugh. But few Valdosta High School fans laughed when their basketball sestet took dives, because these girls really nosedived both in the number of fouls and in their final record.

After losing their first battle, the Kittens came back to crush the Bainbridge Bearcats, 46-36, by hitting 57 percent of their free throw attempts while limiting their fouls to 11. With this win the Kittens grew more confident as they prepared for their next opponents.

With Sharon Flanders, Ruby Knight, and Elaine Robinson all scoring in double figures, the Kittens again came out on top as they outdistanced Westover by a 41-39 margin.

But climbing through the barrage of attacks from their adversaries proved difficult for the sestet as they fell to a low 2-11 chart. Even in playoff competition, the Kittens stumbled to a humiliating 9-73 defeat by committing 16 fouls. With this last defeat, the Kittens fell out of the contest, leaving all hopes of a successful season behind.

Never Never Land Eludes Hoopsters

Never Never Land to many means an imaginary refuge of Peter Pan, Tinkerbell, and the characters of that Sir James Barrie fairy story. But to Coach Joe Mercer and his struggling Kittens, Never Never Land meant being on the high end of the score at the final buzzer.

Valdosta High's girl sestet did not show the dazzling ball handling ability or clever maneuvering of their male counterparts, but they never stopped trying to improve their status.

As forwards Ruby Knight and Micki Folsom moved the ball, rovers Elaine Robinson and Sharon Flanders piled up the points. Combining their various talents with those of other players such as guards Polly Durden and Mala Barker, the Kittens proved their dexterity and determination, especially during their game with Central, in which they lost by only one point.

Yet Coach Joe Mercer's chargers played other games in which mere determination and drive could not give them a win. In these games, the Kittens often fell behind during the first half and never regained the lead. Although their determination and drive never faded, the Kittens found their efforts futile and wasted when the last buzzer sounded, leaving them with defeat

Wildcats Keep on Tracking

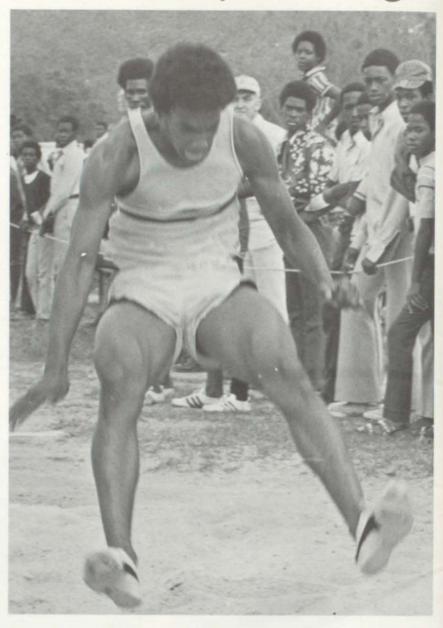

Following the advice of Coach Charles Greene to keep on tracking, the 'Dosta speedsters and fieldmen worked hard and won the region title and a trip to the state AAA track meet.

Keeping on the track with the lightning sprinters and long distance chuggers proved difficult for area competitors. Clifford Bradley, George Roundtree, and other 'Dosta track men contributed to the speed team to break several school records in team and individual performances.

But speed does not win titles without muscle, and the men in the field events provided this ingredient to help the 'Cats. David Register tossed the shot, and springy Rusty Jones jumped the high jump to provide strong links in tracking down the region title.

Albany served as the site for the region meet. There the talented 'Cats ran away with the points in most events, qualifying several members for the trip to the state meet.

Promising Season Ends With Slump

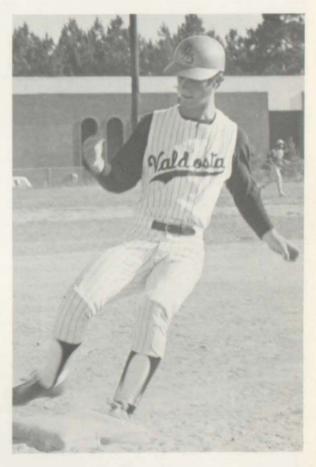

Inspired by winning his first region baseball title the previous year, and having a wealth of returning players, Coach Joe Mercer could do nothing but agree with the area sportswriters who pegged his baseball team to finish number one in the loop standings.

These predictions held through the first nine games as the 'Cats utilized hammering bats and vacuum gloves to coast to a seven and two record and nab the top spot in region 1-AAA.

But after meeting the Purple Hurricanes of Fitzgerald and splitting a doubleheader, the 'Cats contracted the slump disease dreaded by all coaches.

As the infection worsened, the bats lost their snap and the gloves became more prone to errors. Wildcat woes increased when Stanley Bounds' knee injury cost the team his much-counted-upon pitching.

After never recovering from the disease, the 'Cats stumbled through their remaining seven games, registering only two more wins. This dismal ending to a promising season plunged the Wildcats to the lower levels of the standings.

'Cat Fans Know Joy Despite Heroes' Woes

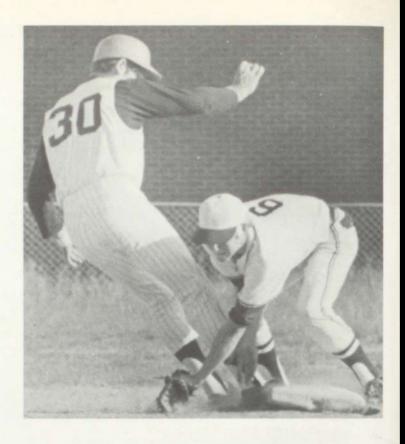

"Oh somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing and somewhere children shout; But there is not joy in Mudville mighty Casey has struck out."

- Thayer

Despite striking out in their efforts to cop a baseball title for the second straight year, Valdosta's "Mudville Nine" found joy in spring tilts.

So did the fans. Foresaking the stands, they lined the fences of Pendleton Park and scampered to find spots on the many pickup trucks, the traditional springtime bleachers of high school students, for better views of the action and the antics of first baseman Paul DeMersseman and superfan Scotty Slocum.

Incessant ragging of opponent batters made Paul the delight of home followers and the bane of all visitors. In the same league with Paul, Scotty used his knifesharp wit and strong lungs to slice up the egos of his rivals.

'Dosta Racquets Split Season Sets

Valdosta's tennis squads managed to split their set of season matches. Coach Julian LeFiles guided his players to four wins and three losses against their area rivals.

For their part, the Kittens "loved" their regular season, posting seven losses in seven matches.

But Mr. John Booth, in his first year of ramrodding the female racqueteers, coached Maggie LaMontagne and the doubles teams of Allen Moseley and Ann Holland and Martica Griffin and Karen Holland to respectable standings in the girls net tourney.

Playing doubles, Ronald Moore and his partner Mike Parrish reached the semifinals in region before bowing. Also, Scotty Slocum scrapped his way into the semifinals.

Golf Team Ends Season in Rough

Like balls lying in the rough after bad drives, the golf team members found themselves in a sad situation at the season's end. After winning their first match against Tift County, 333 to 344, the golfers never seemed to be able to get it completely together. Valdosta found itself placing second in three and four team matches. In addition, the team lost their last regular season match to Crisp County by a mere three strokes.

However, the linksmen never quit striving to improve their game scores. Seniors David Evans, Terry Hiers, and Pearce Scott, and sophomore Mike Haygood made up the foursome that competed against both region and non-region teams.

In the region tourney, Valdosta tied for third place with Crisp County behind Tift County and region winner Moultrie

Student Council Acts Only After Planning

Before anything can be successfully accomplished, it must be carefully planned. For this reason the Student Council meditated and devised channels before attempting to provide the school with various activities and services.

To induce spirit, the Council sponsored the annual Christmas Food Drive, which the seniors won by bringing in the most food both in quantity of items and in price value. This award helped to account for the seniors' copping the Spirit Trophy, also presented by the Student Council.

Another annual event which aroused student interest in school was homecoming. Council members organized the dance and made plans for the homecoming court and the parade. As a new project, the council distributed free pompoms for the state AAA football playoffs.

Because the Student Council placed a juke box in the senior dining room with a speaker in the main lunchroom for the underclassmen, students, for the first time, were able to enjoy something at lunch besides the food. Also, as a service to the students, Council members wearing "May I Help You" signs helped any new student find his way around at the beginning of school.

OUTLOOK Staff Finds Literary Quarters

Although the OUTLOOK staff faced the problem of moving into strange surroundings with a new advisor, Miss Eloise Terry, they hung in there and got out the paper. Their abode, the English bookroom, presented a literary atmosphere for their writings. And eventually, after adding bits of graffiti to the walls and ceiling, the staff christened the room "home, sweet hole."

As one of their major money-making projects, OUTLOOK members sold football programs at Cleveland Field. Profits from the sale of the programs helped finance the publication of the monthly paper, and an additional April 1 edition, the PINEY ROOTER, which was strictly for gags.

From the sale of papers — ten cents a copy — ads, and football programs, the staff gained enough income to finance the paper and to have a surplus. Therefore, they volunteered generously to buy new furniture for the teachers' lounge. With the aid of Principal Lloyd Mims, the staff picked out a Spanish contemporary sofa and easy chairs covered in naugahide, and a number of Boston rockers.

Although buying the furniture was their main project in the spring, the staff also published the RETROSPECT, a literary magazine featuring the writing and artwork of students from each grade on the main campus.

During the latter part of the school year, the staff attended the state convention of the Georgia Scholastic Press Association held at the University of Georgia in Athens, Georgia. They came home bearing a first-place rating.

Special Award Goes to Tri-Hi-Y

Because of their underlying philosophies, the Gamma Tri-Hi-Y Club and the Hi-Y Club had some similar activities. But only one was a winner; the Tri-Hi-Y received the Club of the Year Award.

Both clubs contributed to the religious atmosphere of the school, with the Tri-Hi-Y giving invocations at football games and the Hi-Y holding vesper services on Wednesday mornings before school.

Tri-Hi-Y girls had their own projects: visiting local convalescent homes and selling balloons for the March of Dimes. Both clubs made spirit signs, put sweets in the teachers' lounge on Valentine's Day, and collected soft drink bottles to sell.

To learn about their club duties, boys and girls attended conferences. Tri-Hi-Y members went to a Youth Training Conference at Rock Eagle near Eatonton, Georgia. Officers from both clubs traveled to Thomasville, Georgia, for the Program Planning Caravan.

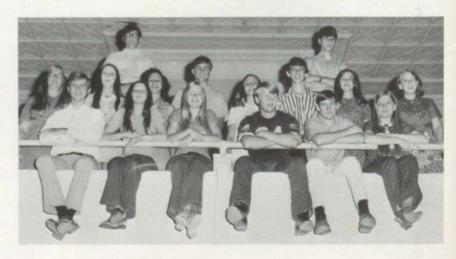

Before going to Atlanta for the combined Youth Assembly, boys and girls participated in a Youth Clinic at Norman Assembly, Norman Park, Georgia.

In Atlanta they presented and debated a bill before the Youth Assembly, attended the Youth Governor's banquet, and took part in the election of officials for the mock assembly.

Language Clubs Round-Up Members

When the new high school is put into operation, students will be involved in a team-teaching process in which all students of a related subject will be taught in one open area. Employing the same concept, the French, Spanish, German, and Latin students for the first time combined their efforts into one Language Club.

During homecoming, the language students shifted from their foreign cultures to that of the Wild, Wild West when they entered their "Patriot Round-Up" float in the parade.

To highlight the year, the Club sponsored Foreign Language Week, during which members placed models of foreign buildings as centerpieces on the lunchroom tables and put up posters throughout the halls.

To emphasize the week, a special day was designated as Foreign Language Day. Members performed various skits to promote interest in four languages.

Future Teachers Anticipate Roles

Sometimes students see teachers only as those blah people standing in the fronts of the rooms droning on and on.

But members of the Future Teachers tried to become acquainted with all of the roles of teachers. At their monthly meetings, in which there were programs relating to teaching, the club became familiar with every aspect of the profession.

Between these meetings, members visited elementary schools in Valdosta in order to assist teachers in instructing classes.

During these excursions, members discovered that teachers played multiple roles, acting as instructors, counselors, and friends.

Along with experiencing actual classroom conditions, club members indulged in other activities associated with teaching. Each month they presented one teacher with a plaque inscribed to the "Teacher of the Month." Also, their officers attended a district meeting of all Future Teachers chapters from this district at South District College in Douglas.

Volunteers Spread Drug Alert Warning

Realizing the seriousness of the drug problem, sixty students volunteered for membership on a drug alert council.

Mrs. Jenny Wisenbaker, guidance counselor, screened the volunteers and chose those boys and girls who were, she believed, outstanding for leadership. She then paired the council members and gave each pair two classes from grades four through nine to visit regularly for the purpose of giving instructions regarding the dangers of drugs.

Before visiting their appointed classes, each pair attended a workshop to prepare themselves for telling younger boys and girls about the hazardous effects of drugs.

Toward the end of their visits to the schools, council members urged each of their classes to participate in a contest for presentation of original and meaningful projects aimed at revealing what the boys and girls had learned about drugs. From each school, council members chose a winner. These groups then competed against each other for a prize of twenty-five dollars.

Eraser Principle Improves SANDSPUR

"Oh my gosh, this page will have to be done over!" This phrase was repeated frequently during the year by Mrs. Harry Wolinski, yearbook advisor. And each time they heard these woeful words, the staff members returned to their erasers. In fact, the eraser principle was the first thing the SANDSPUR staff learned to perfect, and usually after three tries a final page reached completion.

With four weeks of school remaining and one hundred and forty pages unfinished, the staff did not falter. Aside from an occasional joke or anecdote, they settled down to the serious business of cropping pictures, laying out pages, and writing copy.

After all, a group including seven honor graduates and six superlatives had no intention of letting overpowering odds defeat them.

At the first of school, with the same determination, they almost reached a goal of selling four thousand dollars worth of ads. With such a difficult task facing them, the staff had to call on the students of the school to aid in selling ads and in collecting payments from business firms.

As a means of just plain fun, the staff played the OUTLOOK members in a series of basketball games in which the SANDSPUR staff was the victor.

Student Assistants Serve as Buffers

In order that the faculty and administrators would not constantly be interrupted to perform trivial duties, students working in the offices and library during the school day handled all routine tasks.

Serving as buffers in the main office, helpers wrote passes for students going home, answered the phone, and distributed absentee sheets to each teacher.

To relieve guidance counselors of numerous timeconsuming responsibilities, student workers in the guidance offices assumed many odd jobs. Between grading achievement tests and keeping student schedules filed, aides kept busy summoning students from all over the campus for conferences concerning job and college opportunities.

Just as office workers found little spare time to relax, library assistants helped to maintain an efficient library. Under the guidance of the librarians, Mrs. Elizabeth Mathis and Mr. William Pompey, they operated the duplicator machines, checked out and shelved books, prepared overdue notices, and made sure a pleasant and orderly environment prevailed.

Studio 20 Actors Make School Scene

Students who felt the urge to make the scene and who were unable to take regular drama classes found an outlet for their thespian talents in Studio 20, Valdosta High's drama club.

Meeting twice a month with their advisor, Mrs. John McRae, this group planned activities that included staging plays and having a club banquet.

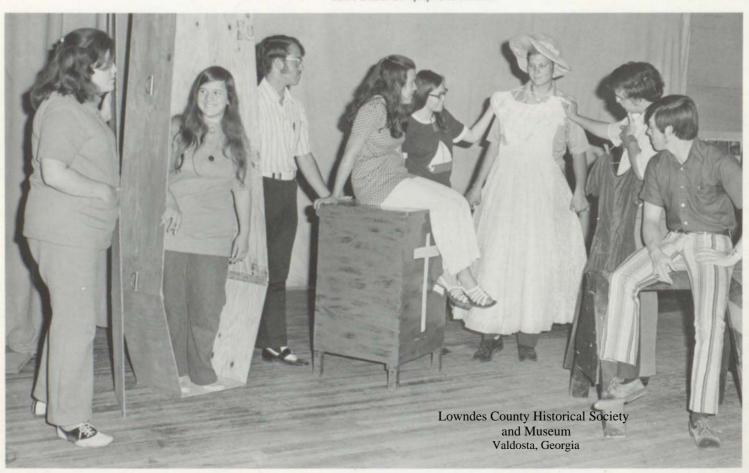

To make their productions free to the public, they sold black and gold ball-point pens with the Wildcat football schedule printed on the side, and bars of soap.

After two weeks of practice, the club went to Gordon Street Elementary School, where they put on their version of Cinderella for the little tykes.

Finally the year was ended with a banquet for drama club members at Minchew's Restaurant. Mr. James Copeland was the guest speaker.

Key Club Upholds Traditional Values

In a time when many teenagers make a fetish of changing all values, one group of boys emphasized the maintenance of traditions.

To carry out this goal, they joined the Key Club, a group sponsored annually by the Kiwanis Club.

They kept up the practice initiated by their older brothers, uncles, and fathers of having two members each week attend the regular Kiwanis luncheon meeting. There the boys heard professional men and politicians from area, state, and national levels speak on current issues.

To keep up the tradition of entering a float in the homecoming parade, the Key Club found that they needed more money than they had in their account. Therefore, the boys became salesmen for a season, selling peanut brittle to friends with strong sweet teeth.

With the profits from this candy sale, club members purchased supplies for their float, which they entitled "Hang 'em High," and for which they received the second place prize.

Club members carried on one job started last year. They helped circulate a petition to get signatures calling for a referendum on the question of the consolidation of city and county governmental bodies, including the Valdosta and Lowndes school systems.

Marchin' Cats Gain National Recognition

Winning the title "Greatest Band in Dixie" two years ago was not too bad, but the Marchin' Cats felt they deserved something more, like the "Greatest Band in the Nation."

And this year they did win national recognition when the band placed first in the Mardi Gras Festivities in New Orleans. Competition for this event was open to high school bands from the rest of the country.

While this national honor climaxed their year, the Marchin' Cats also received other honors for both marching and concert performances. At the Southeastern States Marching Festival, the band, flag corp, honor guard, and drum majors all copped superior ratings, and the concert band received the same commendation at the annual Eighth District Festival in Waycross.

Using the same talents that won the Marchin' Cats all these awards, the band performed during halftime activities of each football game. And each time students and adults gave them a standing ovation.

Marchin 'Cats Win 'Way Down Yonder'

"Way down yonder in New Orleans" at Mardi Gras time means a week-long carnival filled with days of parades, nights of masquerade balls, and with rowdy throngs of funseekers on Canal Street.

But for the Marchin 'Cats, Mardi Gras meant band practice in August, tired legs from repeated drills, and ever-increasing hopes of regaining the title of "Greatest Band in Dixie."

Returning to the contest after skipping a year, the band hoped to regain the title that it lost by one-tenth of a point in 1970.

With a routine featuring a medley of "The New World Symphony," "Mardi Gras," "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans," and a rousing rendition of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" as a finale, band members proved that this year they could put it together.

Traveling to the event in four Greyhound buses, the 'Cats shook off all fatigue for the actual contest. When the results came out, Valdosta had outplayed its nearest opponent, a group from Pennsylvania, to the tune of ten points.

Unfortunately, the Marchin 'Cats could not afford to stay to lead the Rex Parade, the privilege of the "Greatest Band in Dixie."

Pinevale Council Aids School, Community

Not satisfied with a stay-at-home attitude, the Student Council of Pinevale, under the leadership of President Walter Webb, instigated a food drive for the underprivileged of Valdosta as a Thanksgiving project. This drive netted over fifty boxes of fresh and canned food.

Also, the council worked within the walls of Pinevale for the good of the students who elected them.

Heeding the advice of their advisors, Mrs. Betty Kretlow and Mrs. Frances Beard, the council aided students by tutoring those who had trouble keeping up their grades. They also served as mediators in teacherstudent problems.

Finally, the council organized and put on Freshman Day festivities which honored the retiring principal, Mr. C. T. Dickerson, and named Mrs. Frances Beard and Mr. James C. Odom as the year's favorite teachers.

D.E. Club Members Accept Challenges

At the Distributive Education ceremony in Whitewater, Georgia, Mr. Norman Greene, coordinator, challenged all students to make this year the best in Valdosta chapter history. By the end of the year the club had not only copped the state chapter of the year trophy, but had also been credited with fourth place at the national convention held in Los Angeles, California, May 1.

To acquire these honors, club members promoted a program reaching all segments of the community. They placed three billboards with the D.E. emblem on major routes leading into the city. They prepared for the local newspaper a four-page spread on the club's activities. Ron Butler, club reporter and state president for 1972-73, headed this project. And they prepared three hour-long television specials for airing by Clearview of Georgia's Channel 4.

These programs included student interviews and films of the Employer-Employee banquet.

For a project to benefit the community, the club combined two distinct areas, those being the development of twelve Mini-Parks and the volunteer staffing at the city's Boys and Girls Clubs.

Cheerleaders Ignite Flame of Enthusiasm

Football was the name of the game, and spirit was what it was all about! And responsibility for igniting this flame of enthusiasm rested with eight junior and senior cheerleaders, young ladies chosen for their get-up-and-go.

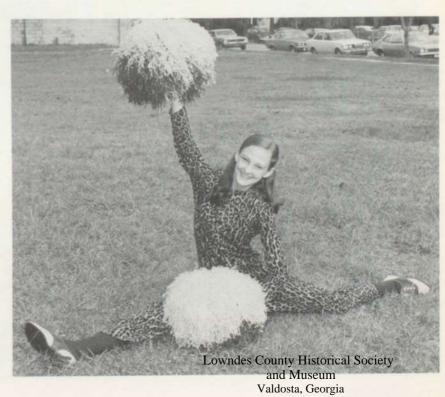

Their job began early in each week with the sale of spirit ribbons. Next they led the cheers at city-wide pep rallies on Thursday nights at Brookwood Plaza. They continued their schedule by firing up the student body with pep rallies on Friday mornings before games.

By selling car tags, the cheerleaders boosted their financial standing and also spread the Wildcat spirit around the town.

Captain Gay Robertson and Co-Captain Pam Maturi led the other cheerleaders as school hostesses who greeted all visiting cheering squads. Gay also sparked each performance when, with hands on hips, she snapped the squad and the crowd to attention by calling out, "Squad set — Go Get 'Em — Set, ready-O let's go!"

Other cheerleaders then took turns calling for cheers.

Pinevale Cheerers Brighten School

While the two Wildcat cheering squads on the main campus gave support to the varsity teams, another squad of cheerleaders on Pinevale Campus helped spark B-team sports.

Carrying the dual responsibility of cheering for both basketball and football, these girls' found that their duties continued throughout the school year.

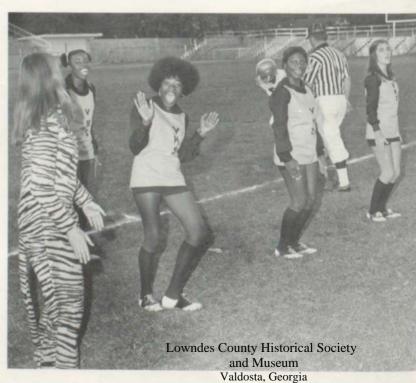

Whether the players took to the gridiron or to the hardwood gym, the girls heartened the teams with their ever-present support. And if cheering at the games did not keep them busy enough, the girls also organized pep rallies.

By creating clever skits for these rallies, the cheerleaders aroused student interest in freshman athletics. Their chatter about a game throughout the day before such an event helped to account for the large crowds attending games.

Cheering Squad Abets Hoopsters

When the chips are down and the going is slow, only good friends rally around. Trite diction! But this cliché proved true in the case of the basketball cheerleaders. They never faltered in their loyalty, whether the hoop teams won or lost.

To provide incentive for the team, the girls, who donned their uniforms — flare skirts and vests — at the end of the football season, sold spirit ribbons during homeroom, aroused spirit at the pep rallies, and made signs for the gym, which left them walking around the remainder of the day with paint from head to toe.

They yelled and jumped when the Wildcat hoopsters finished third in 1-AAA region playoffs. And they kept on yelling when the Kittens failed to muster enough drive to win.

Mary Alice King, captain of the squad, served as chief hostess and energizer. She ramroded the sale of black and gold Wildcat jerseys. Proceeds from this money-raising project financed a spaghetti supper honoring both the boys and girls teams.

Girls Bring Women's Lib to Pinevale Campus

In order not to be left out of the 1972 scene, the girls at Pinevale gave their school a dose of Women's Lib by making several service clubs and the office helper groups the exclusive domain of girls.

And, in spite of male chauvinistic remarks, the absence of males from the staffs of office and library helpers did not hinder the efficient running of these offices. In fact, the female office helpers proved to be fetching in more ways than one because their duties included rounding up students to meet with the principal or to pay overdue fines.

Some girls became activists by joining the Tri-Hi-Y and aiding their local projects. They visited the hospital and sold balloons to raise money for the Easter Seal Foundation. For relaxation, this group trekked to Panama City, Florida, for a day at the beach.

Members of the Future Homemakers of America stayed busy the whole year. They held a FHA Week and an activity day of games, attended district club meetings, and sponsored a delegate, a girl naturally, to the national FHA convention.

Beta Club Follows Two Philosophies

Everyone knows the saying associated with Epicureanism: "Eat, drink, and be merry." But Beta Club members realized that in saying "pleasure is the chief end in life," Epicurus meant the pleasures of learning.

These bright students took delight in learning. But also, like pragmatists, they took a practical view of life — For example, they kept up with their grades to be sure that they met the requirements for Beta membership: an overall average of ninety or better and a deportment average no lower than eighty.

To raise money for their school projects, they sold hundreds of bars of chocolate to non-dieters. Part of the profits from these sales helped them finance a February trip to Atlanta to attend the state Beta convention.

In the fall the club entered a float in the homecoming parade. And they made signs to urge support of all sports teams. They added a little beauty to the school by giving lady teachers flowers on their birthdays. Men received candy.

Only when the club had served others did it turn to its own pleasures by having a banquet at Ashley Oaks and a burger bash at Ocean Pond.

Mr. Mike Rogers, math teacher, served as advisor for the club.

VICA Members Punch Time Clocks

Few members of VICA — Vocational Industrial Clubs of America — could be found on campus after twelve-thirty every day. With the ringing of the twelve-twenty bell, they split to gulp down hamburgers and get ready to punch time clocks at one o'clock.

But these boys and girls did stay around long enough to have a functioning club. In the fall they met with their advisor, Mr. Levy Taylor, and elected officers: president, Harold Conger; vice-president, Robert Morris; secretary, Linda Lissimore, and treasurer, Carolyn Mitchell.

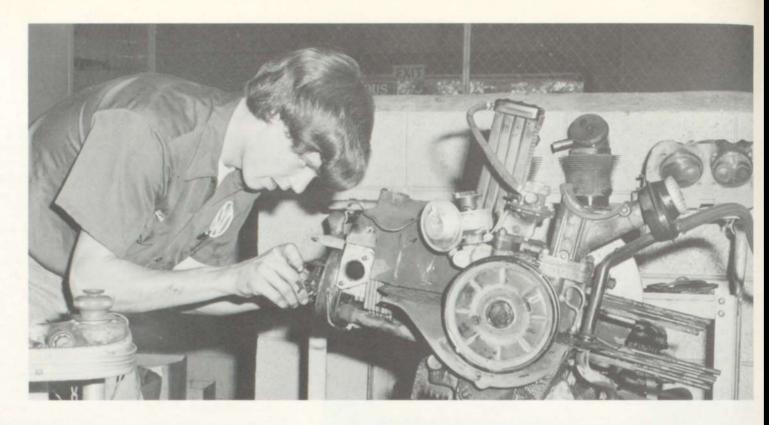

VICA's calendar of events included sending representatives to the state planning meeting, entering a float in the homecoming parade, making field trips to local industries, and entering local trade contests. Club members also entered competition in a contest at a state conference.

At the end of the year the club held an employeremployee banquet.

Initials Explain D.C.T.'s Purpose

Diversified . . . Cooperative. When they modify the noun training, these adjectives really explain the purpose and activities of D.C.T. Club.

D, standing for diversified, represents the variety of jobs the students held. From curling hair to operating factory machinery, their jobs this year reflected an assortment of service and industrial occupations.

C, signifying cooperative performance, indicates the ability displayed by these students when they went to work with others in the business world.

And T, denoting training, provides the student with on-the-job instruction. Usually the jobs filled by D.C.T. students related to their plans for the future.

Although the students kept busy preparing for their futures, they had time between school and work to function as a club. After getting off work at night and before doing tomorrow's homework, the club members toiled weeks on their float for the homecoming parade. Pay-off time for their efforts came when the D.C.T. entry, entitled "Boot Hill," received honorable mention.

While the club failed to bring home state honors, Ernie Carter, parliamentarian, was named fourth in the state after winning the District Extemporaneous Speech Contest.

Jazzmen, Chatters Do Their Own Thing

Following the advice of Brother Isaac Hayes, the JAZZMEN and CHATTERS clubs did their own thing this year. And their thing meant service on behalf of Valdosta High School, their school.

Fired with the funkey feeling of school spirit, the JAZZMEN several times won the weekly spirit trophy awarded at Friday morning pep rallies. In fact, they made a habit of winning. After the announcement, "The winner this week is . . . ," students came to expect a yell from the section where the Jazzmen were sitting. In addition to putting up posters and signs each week, these young people also found time to keep an area of the campus free of trash.

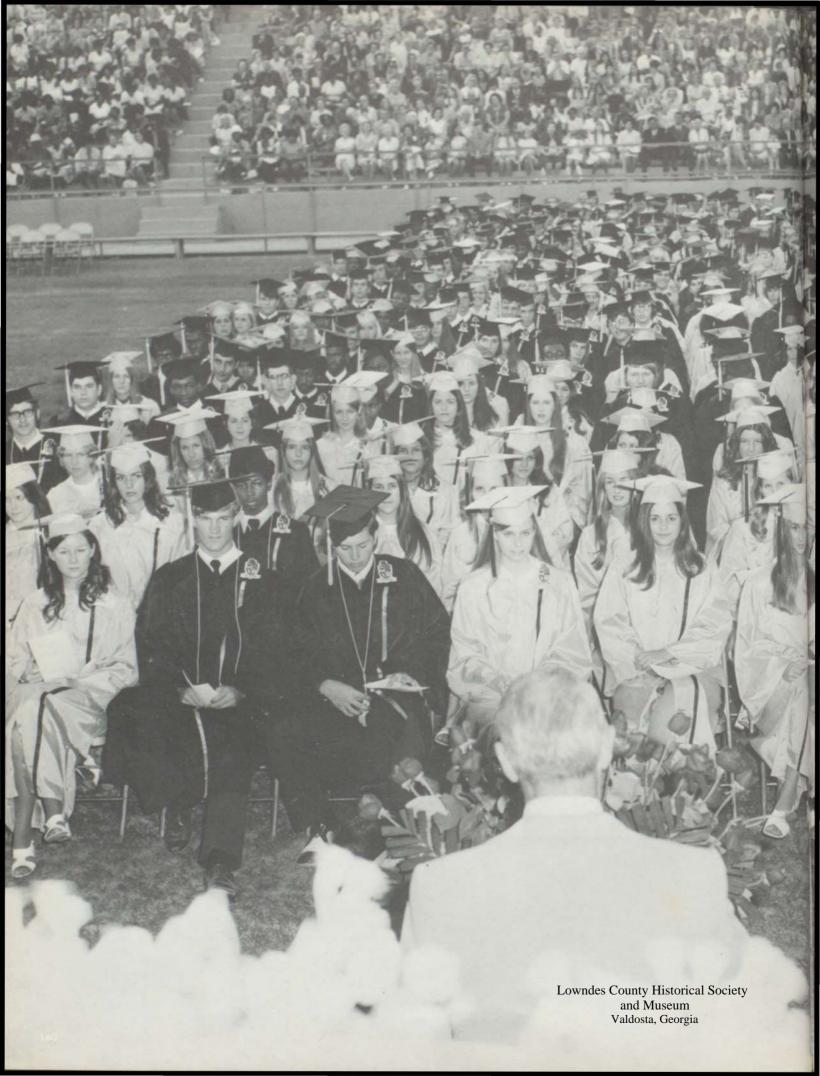

This all-black group realized that service went beyond surface activities and directed much energy to improving relations between blacks and whites.

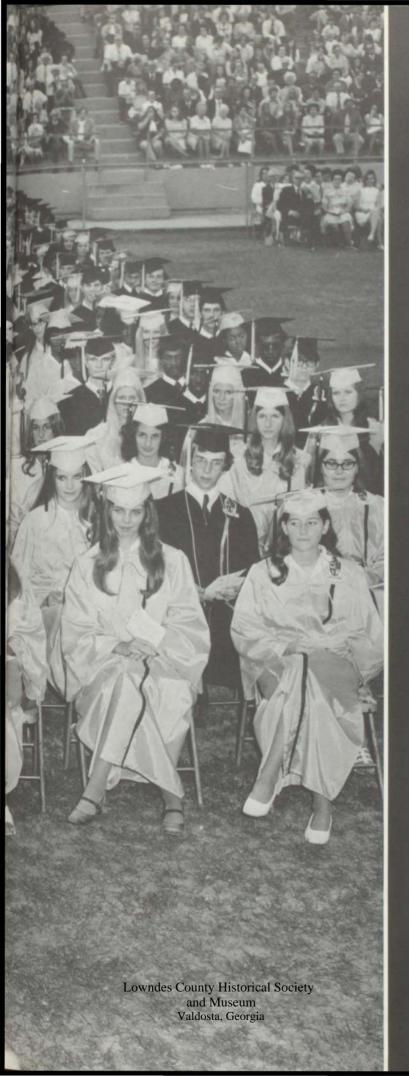

Rivals of the JAZZMEN, the CHATTERS CLUB also worked to improve the school's atmosphere by grading smooth any rough spots on the road of racial harmony.

Often the JAZZMEN and CHATTERS felt the Old West urge to prove who was the top gun in Valdosta, and they met in duels on the basketball court. Though the games proved to be fun for all, neither side would ever admit defeat.

Superlatives Enlighten School Atmosphere

In the vast, dark universe, certain stars stand out in color, size, and brilliance from all other celestial bodies. Just as some stars have more radiance than others, some students seem to illuminate school activities with blazing energies.

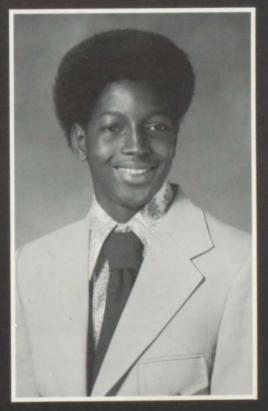

Senior superlatives, the students chosen by the faculty as having brightened all aspects of school life, varied like constellations in characteristics and intensity. Publication editors, club and class officers, athletes, and scholars claimed places among the elite group.

Teachers selected fifteen seniors as being superlative. These included Stanley Bounds, Nancy Rogers, Donna Pitts, Robert Orr, Jim Clarkston, Dorothy Tewell, Maggie LaMontagne, Sherri Teffeteller, Jani Miller, Jack Jenkins, Melanie Eanes, Margaret Espinosa, Robert McCaskill, Steve Stanaland, and Gwen Stickley.

Of the fifteen students selected, Stanley Bounds received the most votes and the designation of Best All-Round Senior.

Select Seniors Appear In All Starry Galaxies

Teachers choose students as senior superlatives for shining in many different fields. Best All-Round Senior Stanley Bounds, better known as the quarterback of the Wildcats, also used his talents in basketball and baseball.

However, he became the top senior for other reasons besides participating in athletics. While serving as vice-president of the senior class, Stanley maintained an academic average that qualified him to become an honor graduate.

Standouts in sports claimed places among the elite group. Steve Stanaland, Jim Clarkston, and Robert Mc-Caskill starred in football, and Steve gained recognition as an All-American.

In an indirect way, Donna Pitts and Jani Miller became superlatives for being spotlighted in athletics. These two girls cheered the Wildcats on the sidelines every Friday night as football cheerleaders.

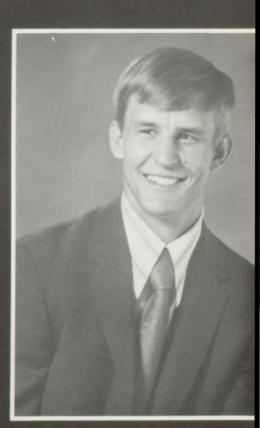

Others exemplified club and class leadership: Robert Orr, Student Council president; Gwen Stickley, drum majorette of the band; Sherri Teffeteller, president of the Beta Club; and Maggie LaMontagne, FTA president.

Outstanding records in academic helped some seniors. Dorothy Tewell devoted many hours in the art department, while Jack Jenkins' scholastic average aided him. Margaret Espinosa graduated as first honor graduate, and also won the STAR student award.

Finally, positions on school publications helped some seniors become members of the group. Melanie Eanes headed the SANDSPUR as editor, while Nancy Rogers served as the editor of the OUTLOOK.

Seniors Supply Go-Power for School

In the picture below, Michael Simmons, Donna Pitts, Stanley Bounds, and Robert McCaskill feed a saddle horse at the Eager Stables. In the same manner, these young people kept school spirit on the go by feeding in their talents and energy.

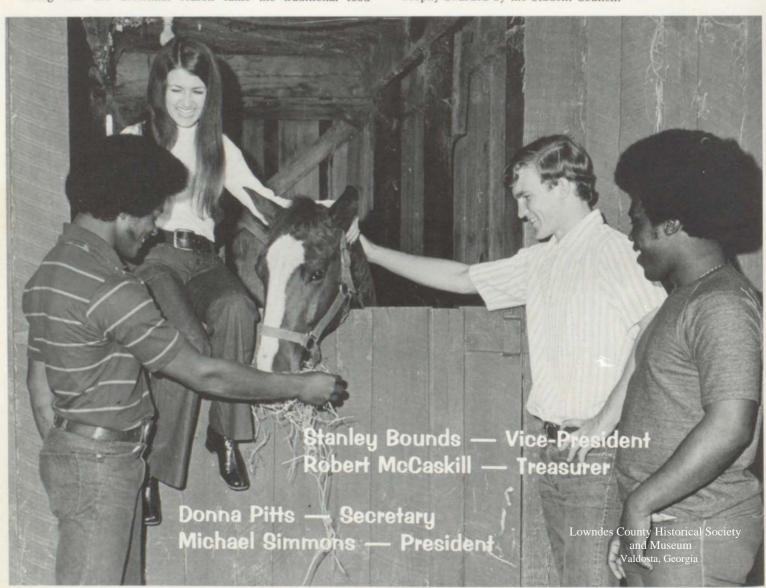

Throughout the entire school year, the senior class participated fully in all aspects of school life. Headed by their officers, seniors gathered every night in the school gymnasium for two weeks before homecoming to build their float for competition in the parade.

Along with the Christmas season came the traditional food drive. And when the time ended for the food to be brought in, the seniors had gathered the most canned goods and staples, both in amount and in cash value.

In addition to their participation in events, the seniors also sponsored programs and activities of their own. Among these were several chapel programs and the annual senior banquet held before the junior-senior dance.

All of this senior imput into the total school program received recognition on honors day when the class won the coveted Spirit Trophy awarded by the Student Council.

Juniors Dare Other Classes to Excel Them

With a zoom like that of a dune buggy when the driver steps on the gas, juniors went into action even before school started. Cheerleaders attended American Cheerleaders Association camp for five days in Leesburg, Florida, while football players survived two weeks of hard work at football camp at Twin Lakes.

Another group of juniors, those from the band, also spent a portion of their time during the summer at Troy State University preparing for the upcoming year.

After school began, juniors continued working hard, but they shifted from extracurricular to academic emphasis. They studied and appreciated such literary works as Hamlet, Ethan Frome, The Scarlet Letter, and Of Mice and Men.

With the establishment of a new course, humanities, juniors studied art, music, history, drama and literature as they relate to twentieth century America.

Other difficult courses included geometry, chemistry, and physics. During spring they felt educated enough to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

As the year progressed, the juniors kept the traditional spirit in their class. During homecoming, their winning float "Baze's Bay" worked well, in more ways than one, the night before the parade. With the spirit of giving in their minds, juniors took second-place honors in the food drive during Christmas.

During spring junior class officers took on the responsibility of presenting the Miss VHS beauty pageant. Junior beauty Barbara Eynon copped the title of Miss VHS.

Sophomores Set Spirit A-Sail

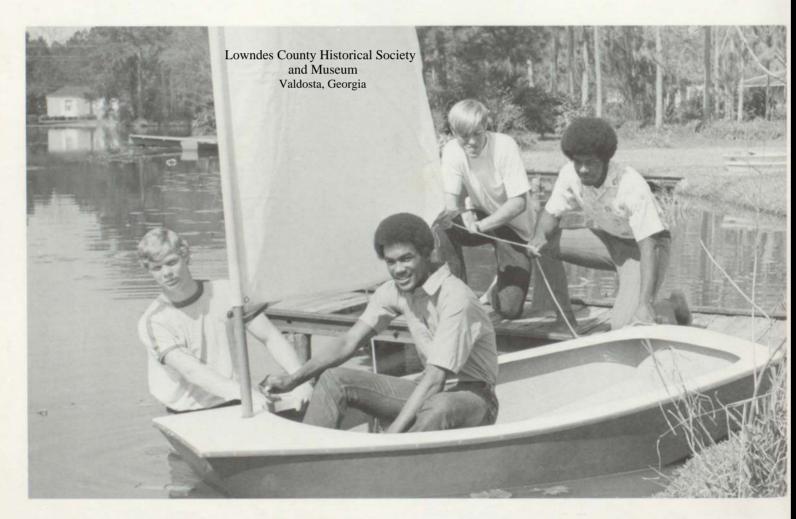

Like ships a-sail on the open sea, sophomores set their minds to the winds of knowledge. Anchoring their vessels of understanding, they traveled through such literary storms as Julius Caesar, Silas Marner, and How Green Was My Valley. Algebra II, geometry, chemistry, and biology required extra attention, and the underclassmen hugged the foreign shores of Spain, France, and Germany with the study of second-year languages.

With enthusiasm on the rudder and spirit at the wheel, they turned the tide with active interest in school functions. Led by officers Stanford Rome, Dub Franklin, Robert Daniels, and David DeMersseman, sophomores predicted the outcome of the homecoming game with Westover High School on their float entitled "Dreams Come True in Death Valley." Dreams did come true when the Wildcats defeated the Patriots 47-6, with the help of sophomore grid stars Robert Daniels, Charles Christian, Dub Franklin, Tony King, Stanford Rome, and Jack Sullivan. Still others scored in tennis, golf, baseball and basketball.

Although they were originally under the propelling steam of the upperclassmen at pep rallies, sophomores showed promising efforts for team support later in the season.

They also made headway toward school support with membership in the band, Beta Club, Language Club, and Tri-Hi-Y, and with participation in such school and community activities as the social science fair, Daughters of the American Revolution essay contest, and drug council. Mrs. Hobbs' homeroom won the Christmas door-decoration contest, while Pam Bazemore and Melody Howard represented their class on the homecoming court.

Dub Franklin watches the action on the field while Jack Sullivan takes a moment to rest. These sophomore 'Cats regularly saw second half action after the big team had rolled up a lead.

Sophomores Help Band Win at Mardi Gras

On the night when the band made its triumphal return after winning the title of "Greatest Band in the United States" at Mardi Gras, band director Frank Butenschon cuts the cake. Two front row spectators wait for servings: Bertha Cooper, senior clarinetist, and Phyllis Jones, a sophomore member of the Flag Corps.

Pinevale Freshmen Keep on Trucking

While students, parents, and politicians in other places moaned about the perils of busing, ninth-grade boys and girls at Pinevale kept their cool and kept on trucking. They had no buses. Many of them traveled several miles each day across railroad tracks and over bumpy streets to reach school.

They also had no murals on their walls like those at Valdosta Junior High and at Valdosta High School's main campus. But by unanimous agreement they had one super-plus, teachers who encouraged them to do their best and to realize that the "word is people . . . the time is now."

In the spring the students honored two teachers, Mr. James Odum and Mrs. Frances Beard, as their choices for teachers of the year.

Mr. James Smith, assistant principal, helped Mr. C. T. Dickerson, principal, maintain law and order. Mr. Smith held open house in his office all day long.

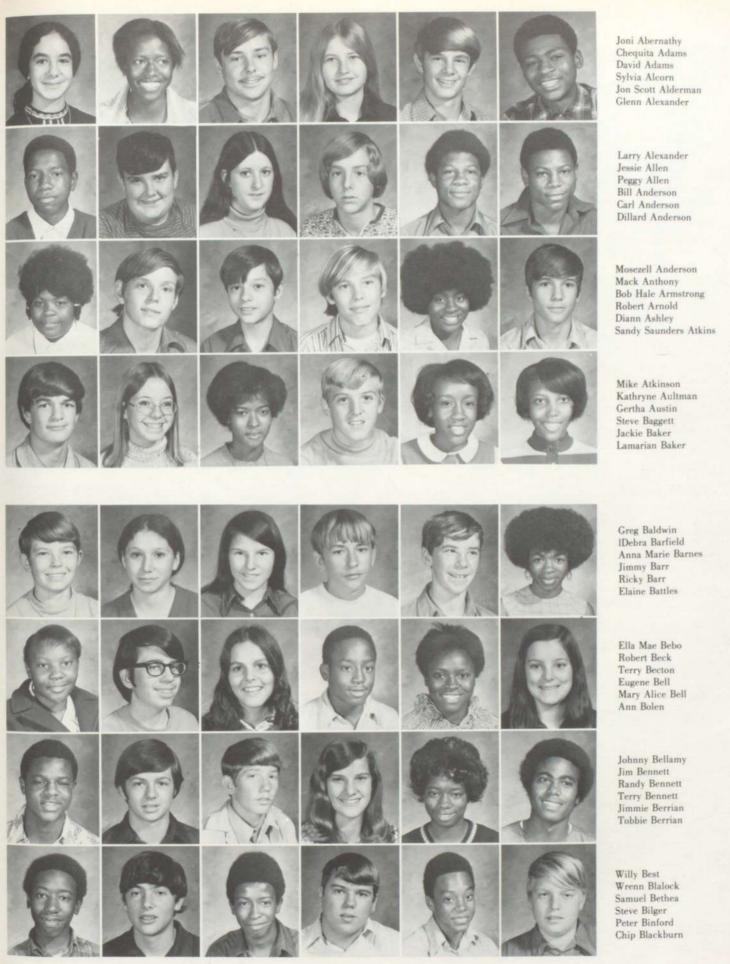

On Wednesdays, Mr. Isaiah Isom, shop teacher, doubled as SANDSPUR advisor and gave the Pinevale staff transportation uptown to the main campus.

Altogether the teachers furnished an atmosphere in which leaders — like the officers pictured below — could emerge.

Remember the first time you saw your name in print?

There it was: Robert White, so big and bold and strong the whole world could see it. omer slammed a two-run

Gish's 12-hit attack was paced by Robert White, who hit a pair of home runs, and Jack alen, who put one over the Actually the whole world couldn't see it. But everybody that made any difference could. Your father could. Your teacher could. Your friends could. And they all did.

That was the day you learned the power of print. The strength, the impact of the printed word. Impact that grew when you ripped it out and showed it around. Impact that lasted as it yellowed on the bulletin board in your room.

Impact so great you just couldn't imagine anything greater. Until years later, you saw your picture on a printed page . . .

Where will you find yourself in a year or two?

Locker talk has always been a part of high school life. Seniors Cindy Gee and Jimmy Kelly leave their English 123 class in order to pose for this typical scene.

Join the Air Force and you will find yourself doing a great job at an exciting duty station. That's because the Air Force gives you the chance to learn a skill, and the chance for foreign travel. Just two of the reasons thousands of young men and women enlist each year.

Whatever your goals are, Air Force training and travel can take you a long way toward getting your future off the ground.

Boosters Lend Yearbook Support

Without public support, Valdosta High School would not be the successful school it is today. For example, if only the students attended the football games, the excitement would not be as intense. Many parents and members of the community lend a helping hand by joining organizations such as the Touchdown Club and the Band Boosters. Some businesses buy ads in the school newspaper and yearbook. And a small group of professional men who cannot advertise support Valdosta High School as SANDSPUR boosters. They give greatly appreciated financial aid which makes the yearbook publication possible.

Early Frost Nips Life of Mrs. Emma Banks

Mrs. Emma Mae Mobley Banks

"But oh! fell death's untimely frost That nipt my flower sae early."

Robert Burns

Frost came early in the life of Mrs. Emma Mae Mobley Banks before her flower had yet reached full bloom. Her death from a heart attack on June 2, 1972, left an empty place in the hearts of her family and friends, including the boys and girls at Valdosta High School.

Mrs. Banks served for eighteen years in the lunchroom of Valdosta High School. As manager, she planned for nutritional meals and put up good-naturedly with any complaints made by the students. She was a member of the Georgia Food Service Association.

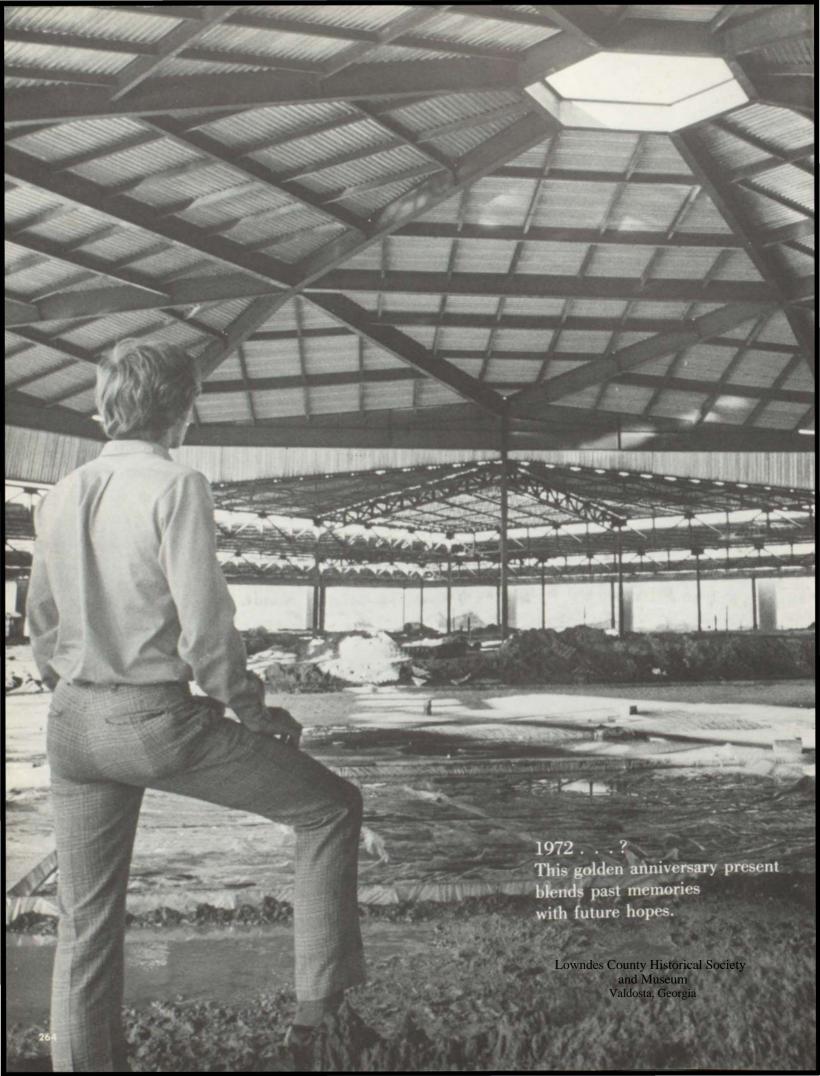

Outside the school, Mrs. Banks' life revolved around her family and her church, Bethel C.M.E., where she was a stewardess, organist, choir member, and treasurer of the Flower Club.

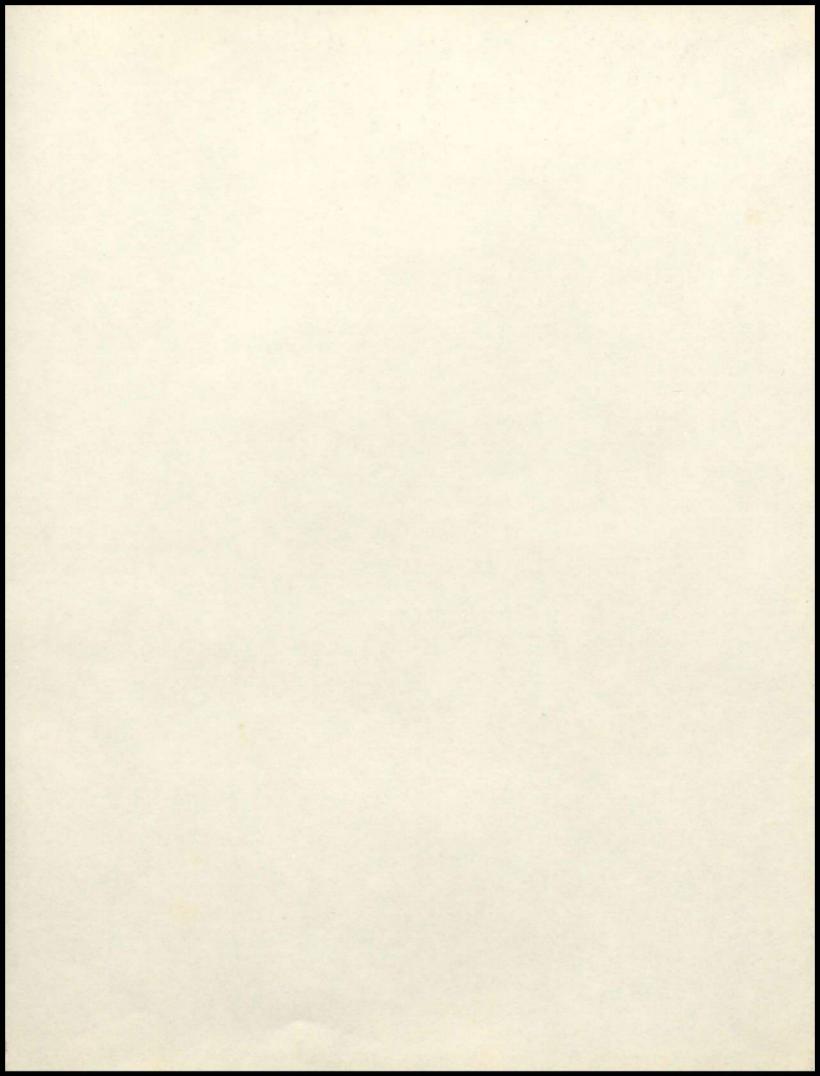

Her husband, Mr. Robert L. Banks; her children, S. Walter Banks and Mrs. James C. Murphy; and her five grandchildren will mourn and will miss her.

And the lunchroom, where she brought dignity and amiability to a service job, will be dimmer without her.
